Government Disposed to Make Amend to Mexico for Crossing Border in Search of Comrades

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Secretary of State Lansing today characterized the invasion of Mexico, near Progreso, Tex., yesterday, by a small body of American troops as a "hostile act."

"The fact that the American party was in pursuit of Mexican bandits who had seized the two American soldiers does not detract from the seriousness of the case," he stated.

It was indicated by officials that three officers, who led the American expedition, Lieutenants Mort, Peyton and Waldron, will be tried by court-martial.

Officials today were considering sending word to the Carranza government that the action of the American party in crossing the border would not be condoned by this government. They wanted to make it plain to the head of the Mexican government that the leaders of the expedition would be punished.

The State Department gave out the

GREAT CAMPAIGN FOR JEWISH RELIEF ON

Today was Jewish Relief Day in America.

President Wilson has set it aside as the national day for remembering the Jewish sufferers from the war.

Millions of stricken Jewish old men, women and children of Bukowina, Lithuania, Galicia and Russian Poland appeal to the people of this country today for immediate help.

From the lands of death, disease and desolation comes the cry of a starving and homeless people for aid from a country that enjoys comparative luxury and contentment.

The people of Boston had an opportunity today to do their share for the countless millions of Jews who are without shelter, except hovels and deserted trenches, without food, without clothing, without medicines. The rigorous Russian Winter is upon them.

Backward and forward war has surged for the last eighteen months over country inhabited by no less than 8,000,000 Jews until all the villages, houses and other buildings have been destroyed for "strategical reasons."

The greatest sufferers in the war are perhaps the Jews who have been caught between the German-Austrian

AMAZING CHARGES ON J'N.

Ex-Deer Island Girl Prisoner Declares Woman Was Driven Insane; Dramatic Story of Suicide

Charges that women prisoners at Deer Island have been driven insane by solitary confinement or have been taken half dead from the dark cell, and that a male prisoner had shouted, "No more fish for me!" as he committed suicide, were made today at the hearing of William R. Scharton's petition for the removal of David B. Shaw as penal commissioner.

Two women prisoners declared they had been put in a pitchdark cell for periods longer than the time permitted under the law; and said they had been fed only one slice of bread and a can of water each day.

One woman said she had been struck on the cheek by Carlton L. Brett, the deposed master of the Deer Island House of Correction, and accused Brett of forcing her to strip herself of her clothing in his presence.

FEARED INSANITY.

The same witness said she had used a knife to cut a small hole in the dark cell partition "so that she would not go crazy."

One of the criticisms some time ago of Shaw's administration of the jail was that a company of which his brother was a member furnished fish to the jail without advertised bidding, and that fish was the forced diet of prisoners four times a week. Fish was mentioned today in the story of Howard McSweeney, who told of the suicide at the jail. He was questioned by Mayor Curley, but stuck to his story that he had seen an unnamed prisoner kill himself by jumping from the third tier of cells to the ground floor after shouting: "No

BOYS ROB STAHL'S BANK

Four Armed Chicago Youths Hold Up Depositors, Steal $12,000 and Make Their Escape in Auto

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Adopting Jesse James tactics, four youths, all armed, entered the Washington Park National Bank, of which "Jake" Stahl, former manager of the Boston American baseball team, is vice-president, five minutes after it opened for business today, held up nearly a score of the bank's customers in the lobby, intimidated a dozen clerks, and escaped with $12,000 in currency, according to the first hasty count.

Before alarm could be given, the "baby bandits" were several blocks away in a small automobile, in which a fifth member of the gang had waited outside of the bank.

FIVE BOYS IN GANG.

The boys pulled up to the building in their car, which bore a sign, "License applied for." Four of them went into the bank. A crowd had gathered outside. The fifth member of the gang stood before the door of the bank, and with his revolver kept anyone from approaching.

While three of the bandits made the bank compelled the patrons to stand against the wall with their arms uplifted, among them Municipal Judge Frey, one of the band ordered R. A. Delasusa, paying teller, to hand over all the currency he had just brought from the vault for the beginning of the day's business.

The teller complied with the command, and the youthful robbers backed out of the door and leaped into their machine.

Officials of the bank said after the robbery that the institution was fully protected by insurance.

STAHL'S STATEMENT.

According to A. F. Olson, cashier of the bank, no attempt was made to rob the bank's patrons, the bandits apparently being content with the currency the paying teller handed over.

"It was just after 9 o'clock," said Vice-President Stahl, "when the four young fellows came in, all of them carrying guns. Two of them lined up the customers in the lobby, while the other two made for the cashier's cage. While one had a gun on the paying teller, the other went for the money. They got about $12,000 in currency."

The bank is at Sixty-third and Evans avenue, in the Woodlawn section of the city.

The bandits escaped north on Evans avenue, driving toward the downtown district.

'I Loved Husband, Hoped for Reunion,' Testifies Defendant

Providence, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Elizabeth G. Mohr today again took the witness stand and resumed the telling of her own story under direct examination by her counsel, Arthur Cushing. Today she said that the only conversations she had with the chauffeur, George Healis, was to tell him that she did not want her son to go with Dr. Mohr to Newport because of the presence of Miss Emily Burger, and denied that she had ever given or offered money to the three negroes. Her story as told today is as follows:

"KNEW HE LOVED ME."

Mrs. Mohr was questioned in direct examination by her senior counsel, Arthur Cushing:

Q.—Mrs. Mohr, I have brought you up to the year 1915. I now want to ask you of a matter that happened before that time. You referred to the various acts of cruelty of your husband up to Christmas, 1913. I'll ask you also if during that time he was kind and generous? A.—Yes, he was very kind.

Q.—And some times he was also very generous? A.—Yes.

"I would never divorce my husband. Never! I felt that I could always win him back. I knew that way down deep in his heart he loved me, and no one else, no matter who he went around with."

Mrs. Mohr threw out her arms as she made this statement, and with a strong voice she cried it out to the jury until the very end, where her voice faltered and was barely audible.

The Attorney-General jumped to his feet and asked that the latter portion be repeated. Judge Stearns turned to Mrs. Mohr very kindly and said:

"Mrs. Mohr, I know you are doing your very best, but it is the Attorney-General's right to hear everything you say. Please make an effort and keep up your voice as much as possible."

Mrs. Mohr turned to the Attorney-General, and for the first time during the trial she mentioned his name. She said:

"Mr. Rice, I am straining myself to the utmost. You must have patience with me."

Q.—On the Christmas eve of 1913 what were the domestic relations between you and Dr. Mohr? A.—We had not been very friendly for a few days before Christmas. On Christmas eve I expected him home at 5 o'clock and he didn't return until 9. When he got in the house he called Charlie to one side and said: "Ask your mother if she wants me home." I said to him: 'Of course, I want you home on Christmas eve. It is the place you belong with your children, especially when Santa Claus is coming tonight." He took off his coat and as he passed the living room he saw the Christmas tree that I had decorated. He turned around to me and said: "That is very beautiful. It takes you to do things, Elizabeth." Helen Hamm, the servant girl, who has testified here, was assisting me to carry down the presents after the children had gone to bed. My husband turned to her and said: "I will help you, Alice."

"Then he turned to me and said: 'I will help you, Elizabeth. I don't want to be on the outs with you on Christmas Eve.' I said: 'Kiss me and make up.'"

"EXTREMELY HAPPY."

Mrs. Mohr's voice trembled, and after a few minutes hesitation, during which the courtroom awaited breathlessly, she continued:

"The next day we had dinner together and we were extremely happy."

Q.—Did you give Dr. Mohr a Christmas present that year? A.—Yes. I gave him a leather hat-box.

Q.—In February, 1914, did you place an injunction against his property? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you sue him for separate maintenance? A.—Yes.

Q.—What allowance did you get? A.—One hundred dollars a month for myself and two children.

Q.—What was his income? A.—Fifty-two thousand dollars a year.

Q.—Did you think that an allowance of $100 was fair in view of the doctor's annual income of $52,000?

Attorney-General Rice—I object on the ground that the court decided that matter and whatever she thinks about it wouldn't make any difference.

Attorney Cushing—There is no need to rule on it, Your Honor. I will withdraw the question.

Q.—In the Summer of 1914 you filed a supplementary petition to your separate maintenance petition and you added a number of extra charges. Why did you do that? A.—When I started the case for separate maintenance I did not think it would ever come to court. I had no intention of asking for a divorce, but when I was told that it would be pressed for trial, Mr. Cushing said that I would have to have specific grounds to get a maintenance decree. I had plenty of them. But I thought that just serving the papers on him would be sufficient to make him see things in a different light.

WANTED TO MAKE UP.

Q.—You explained previously about leaving the Newport home. Didn't you have a conversation with Dr. Mohr on the night before you left? A.—Yes; we had friends that day, which was a very unusual thing. The doctor was very talkative, and after the people departed I went to my bedroom. I told him that I was going to the Seneca Convent at Newport, where they keep boarders. He asked me what it would cost, and I told him $60 a month for my children and myself. He then asked me why I didn't take the injunction off the real estate. I told him to see Mr. Cushing about it. He held out his hand and said, "Goodbye, Elizabeth," and I said, "Goodbye, Charles." That was all that was said.

THREW COAT OUT.

Q.—When you left the Newport estate, what was the attitude of the servants? A.—I had discharged three of them, Martha Wilson, Julia Duffy and Helen Hamm. One of the servants came to my bedroom on the morning that I was leaving and said, "When do you intend to get out, Mrs. Mohr?" The attitude of the servants was bitter on account of me discharging them. Two of them there have testified here (Julia Duffy and Helen Hamm), and the other is out of the State.

Q.—Did you, before you left, did the doctor do anything in regard to your clothing? A.—Yes, he took my fur coat and threw it out the bathroom window on the second floor. He also threw out another coat and Alice Ferguson picked them up and had them in the stable. I happened to see him running across the lawn with the two coats and I got an officer and got them back.

ASSAILS CHARGE OF CONSPIRACY IN DEATH PLOT

Providence, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr, the first and chief witness in her own defence, today flatly contradicted previous witnesses for the prosecution, and unequivocably denied that she conspired to kill her husband.

She declared that she never gave money to Brown, Spellman or Healis, that she never offered any of them money to commit any crime, that she did not say she prayed for her husband's death, that she loved him and would not give him an absolute divorce.

In direct contradiction to the testimony of Constable Wallace of Barrington, one of the most important witnesses for the prosecution, Mrs. Mohr declared that he started the conversation with her at Warren, that he said he knew two men who "had it in for" the doctor, and that she did not tell him that if some people had gone through what she had the doctor would have been dead long ago.

Mrs. Mohr testified she pleaded frantically at the hospital to be allowed to see her husband when he was dying, and when this was refused asked that she be telephoned every fifteen minutes.

"I don't know what I did for fifteen minutes after I received news of the doctor's death," she said. "I was almost frantic. I remember you (Attorney Cushing) called me up and said you would see me."

Attorney Cushing brought out the fact that when he visited Mrs. Mohr that day he had a custodian petition with him, and Mrs. Mohr testified she signed it at the lawyer's suggestion.

Mrs. Mohr testified that she did not see Brown and Healis at her home on the night of Friday, August 27, and that she never at any time saw the two together.

"You heard Healis say Brown exhibited a $20 bill which he said you gave him. Was that true?" Attorney Cushing asked.

"No," declared Mrs. Mohr. "I never gave Victor any money."

"Did you ever offer him any money to commit any crime, the murder of Dr. Mohr or any other crime?"

"Certainly not," was the emphatic answer.

"Did you ever give Brown any money for a motorcycle light or other accessories?" the witness was asked.

"I never gave Victor Brown any money for anything," Mrs. Mohr said.

Questioned about the morning after the murder, when she was taken to the police station, Mrs. Mohr said:

"When I got to police headquarters they brought me into the room where the three colored boys were and began to question me. I told Chief O'Neil that my attorney, Mr. William F. Carroll, was outside the door and that I wanted him in. I was told that he would not be al-

WIFE READY TO LICK HAND THAT BEAT HER ---SAYS DOROTHY DIX OF MRS. MOHR

A T the time of Dr. Mohr's death she had a separation suit and a divorce suit pending against him, and had got an attachment on his property, but she asserted her only object in the world in bringing these suits was merely to bring Dr. Mohr to his senses and that she never in the world had the slightest idea of pressing them. They were, apparently, a sort of sentimental litigation—of the sort that might be recommended in advice to the lovelorn. Mrs. Mohr likewise testified that her threats in the card and letter about Miss Burger and to Miss Ormsby and various other of the doctor's feminine friends were never intended to be taken seriously, but were designed merely as a sportive cry of "boo" to scare them into good behavior, and that it was absurd to suppose that they had any sinister bearing on this case. That was the picture that Mrs. Mohr tried to get before the jury—a woman so dog-like in her devotion that she licked the hand that beat her—a wife so humble that when she was smitten upon one cheek she turned the other; a woman whose devotion to the man whom she characterized as a drug fiend and a drunkard and a libertine was so great that all she asked was just the privilege of forgiving him and taking him back to her arms, no matter how brutally he treated her.—Dorothy Dix on Mrs. Mohr's story.

'Love Amazing,' Says Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX.

Providence, Jan. 27.—Patient Griselda was a peevish and unreasonably exacting wife compared to Mrs. Elizabeth Mohr who, on the witness stand in her own behalf, broke the world's record for feminine devotion and forgiveness in relating the story of stormy matrimonial career.

For Mrs. Mohr testified that her husband had beaten her black and blue repeatedly whenever the humor struck him; that he had knocked her unconscious, that when she went home to her dying mother he inflicted fifty blows upon her as he met her at the door on her return; that he had threatened many times to kill her; that he had terrorized her with the threat of death into returning to him property that he had deeded to her, that he had insulted her and humiliated her in every possible manner; that he had flaunted his infidelities in her face, bringing his women associates into her very home; that he had turned her out of her house and home and told her to shift for herself; that he had abused her in every way in which a man can abuse a helpless woman, an and yet, she declared, that in spite of all this, her affection for him had never for a moment wavered and at all times her only wish and prayer was to be reunited to him.

STILL LOVED HIM.

"I loved him. He was my husband," she whispered sibilantly, "if anything had happened to the doctor it would have just killed me."

And as she muttered these words of superhuman humility and angelic sweetness it must be said that Mrs. Mohr looked the part. Sitting in the big witness chair, she was a picture of morbid melancholy. Her widow black hat drooped, her shoulders drooped. The corners of her mouth sagged down. Her voice dripped tears as she spoke, and was acted so low that it was next to impossible to hear what she said and the judge and the lawyers had to ceaselessly importune her to speak up louder.

Leaving aside Mrs. Mohr's own attitude of amazing meekness under all provocations, it was as sordid and pathetic a story she told of a woman's sufferings at the hands of a brutal and unfaithful husband and anyone ever listened to.

According to her testimony she and the doctor were married at some indefinite time and place in Brooklyn in 1903, and lived with reasonable peace and happiness until the latter part of February, 1909. Then her troubles began. She might after the doctor had given her a terrific beating be told her that she was not really his wife and that they had never been married at all when she was going to Brooklyn to see if she could not find some record of it; he told her to put me out of the house as he was not married to me and was dead.

MARRIED IN LYNN.

Thereupon she said, she left him and went to her mother's, telling him that she would never come back until she had a wedding ring. After some time they were remarried and went to Lynn, Mass., where a marriage ceremony was performed. This marriage license was offered in evidence and curiously enough the name on it is spelled "Moore" instead of "Mohr."

It was about the same time that Miss Burger came into the Mohrs' lives as a disturbing factor. Miss Burger was a patient of the doctor.

"They went together for a year," said Mrs. Mohr, "and I overlooked a great many things, but finally I got so I could stand it no longer. Then we were going out so much together in public. Once as I was watching my dinner, I overheard them talking over the telephone and making an appointment and I called up Miss Burger and told her that she must let my husband alone and that I would not stand for it and she promised to do so.

"That night when my husband came home he was furious with me and gave me a terrible beating, so that my arm was all bruised and my eye was blackened up and he said to me, 'Now you let my German friend alone or I will kill you,' put me out of the house, and I stayed out in the yard until about 2 o'clock, and finally climbed in through the cellar window.

BEAT HER AGAIN.

"I then went to Emily Burger's father's house and told him of his daughter's conduct and I also went to see her brother and asked him if he couldn't make his sister keep away from my husband, and the doctor was very angry and gave me another beating.

"At that time all of our property was in my name. The doctor was afraid that he would get into trouble, and he had all his real estate and his bank accounts in my name and he wanted me to give it back to him, but I refused to do so. I told him that that was all the protection that I had and he told me that he would kill me if I did not do it.

"One day he made an appointment for me to meet him at Cushing's office at 9 o'clock and there over the property to him, and he showed me a gun and said he would kill me that night if I did not do it.

Mr. Cushing advised not to do it, but I told him I knew the doctor meant to kill me unless I did and that it would be better to sign over the deeds than have anything like that happen. I hated to give it up, especially Montpelier, the place at Newport, because the doctor had given me that for a Christmas gift.

"One day I got a telephone message saying my mother was dying. I told the doctor I was going to see her and he said I must be home by 10:30 the next morning. My mother died at 8 o'clock and I did not get home until late. When I did the doctor met me at the door and struck me fifty times.

"The doctor also demanded that I turn over to him my jewelry and when I refused to do so he threatened to kill me and terrorized me so I got the key to my safety deposit box and gave it to him."

During the year 1913 Dr. Mohr refused to let his wife come to Providence, where he was living, and began importuning her to give him a divorce, which she refused to do. About this time he addressed her a letter that read as follows:

"Madame: I was up to see the laundress and she told me you had phoned and don't want to bother my curtains. I don't want anything to do that reminds me of you. If you ever put your foot in my house I will about kill you. You are absolutely barred from all my places in Providence. I will never again associate with you or have anything to do with you. The only time that I will be under the same roof with you is when I may come to Newport. When you come to town you may get your knife ready for they will be very useful when you are shifting for yourself. You may also get your leather pillow. Ta, ta."

TURNED HER OUT.

No affairs went with the Mohrs, according to Mrs. Mohr's testimony; the doctor beating and mistreating her, drifting and resulting her, openly unfaithful, taking away from her the property she had given her, even her trinkets, turning her out of his fine house, so she had to go and live in three rooms in a boarding house with her children, and yet never once, asserts this devoted creature, did she harbor any sentiments in her soul except love and devotion for her husband, and a burning desire to be reconciled to him.

As to spying upon him through means of bribing his servants, she said, that was additional proof of her love.

"He was my husband, and I wanted to know what he did," she exclaimed tenderly.

At the time of Dr. Mohr's death she had a separation suit and a divorce suit pending against him and had got an attachment on his property, but she asserted that her only object in the world in bringing these suits was merely to bring Dr. Mohr to his senses, and that she never had the slightest idea of pressing them. They were, apparently, a sort of sentimental litigations of the sort that might be recommended in advice to the lovelorn.

Mrs. Mohr, likewise, testified that her threats in the card and letter about Miss Burger and to Miss Ormsby and various others of the doctor's feminine friends were never intended to be taken seriously, but were designed merely as a sportive cry of "boo" to scare them into good behavior, and that it was absurd to suppose that they had any sinister bearing on this case.

STRANGE PICTURE.

That was the picture that Mrs. Mohr tried to get before the jury —a woman so dog-like in her devotion that she licked the hand that beat her—a wife so humble that when she was smitten upon one cheek she turned the other; a woman whose devotion to the man whom she characterized as a drug fiend and a drunkard and a libertine, was so great that all she asked was just the privilege of forgiving him and taking him back to her arms, no matter how brutally he had treated her.

lowed in and that I had better do my talking now."

The testimony of Constable Wallace of Barrington, one of the most important witnesses for the State, was flatly contradicted by Mrs. Mohr when she declared that the policeman started a conversation with her after he had been expressly forbidden to do so by Attorney Cushing. She also denied that she told the constable that if some people had been through what she had brought they would have killed the doctor long before.

Mrs. Mohr was called to the stand at 9:47, but, owing to the absence of the court stenographer, was excused and ordered back at 2. The usual number of spectators were on hand, including City Solicitor Joseph Hennessey of Lowell, Mass., who is a guest of Attorney John J. Fitzgerald of Boston, counsel for Mrs. Mohr.

While waiting for the stenographer, Judge Arnold took occasion to make an address to the representatives of the press.

Frederick McCartin of counsel for Mrs. Mohr, stated that she received thirty-six letters of encouragement today.

Mrs. Mohr was called to the stand at 2:55.

"Because I loved him"—That was Mrs. Mohr's complete explanation of her repeated attempts to induce Emily Burger away from Doctor Mohr, attempts which went so far as to include the "postcard warning" on which the State placed so much importance.

"Because I loved him" was her reason for conferences with her servants, with Miss Florence Timony, the doctor's secretary, with Healis, his colored chauffeur, with Brown, his colored office boy, and with everyone else whom she might use to keep her in touch with the movements of her husband that she might know what new strategy to employ to keep him for herself alone.

HOPED AGAINST HOPE.

"Because I loved him" was the reason—an unreasonable, illogical reason, a woman's reason, but nevertheless a still an all-powerful reason—why she continued to seek reconciliation, hoping against hope that the hate would prove real, more lasting than the broken promises of former agreements.

And it was its very unreasonableness, illogicalness, that made this explanation ring true, that kept that crowded court room hanging breathlessly upon every word, that sympathy and belief showing in every face, as she told in a low voice and so low as to be hardly audible, the incidents in her story of her married life.

Not one of all did they carry conviction, compel sympathy, but the appearance of the woman herself carried that unreasonable reason last detail. Her features, her figure, her carriage, her dress, every single detail of her personality certainly seemed to belong to that kind of woman who would forgive and forgive all reason, to love, even when every act of the object of that love seemed to be deliberately calculated to kill her love.

LOVE, ALWAYS LOVE.

In spite of the brutality at the hands of Dr. Mohr, in spite of beating after beating, which she described to the jury, in a toneless voice that seemed least of all to carry with it any malice, she never had him arrested—because she loved him.

When he was arrested on a serious charge, when her testimony against him was sought by the police in the belief that it would put mercy assure his punishment if he were guilty, but also prove compensation to her for an offence which was against her as well as against the law, she refused to give that testimony in spite of repeated efforts by the police that finally led her to leave the State to avoid their insistent requests.

And she refused her testimony because she loved him. She declared and said, when asked by Attorney Cushing why she avoided testifying:

"I didn't want anything done to the doctor. If anything had happened to him it would have killed me."

Again when she was asked why it was that she, the wife of Dr. Mohr, while separated from him, corresponded with his employes, even with the colored servants, she answered that it was because she loved him. Her answer was:

"I always tried to keep the doctor straightened out. I wanted to find out just what he was doing, and I had no money to hire detectives.'

Back of all these answers which startled the court was the secret of her life of horror, back of the humiliation to which she was subjecting herself in thus telling of a love that was as hopeless as it was constant, in thus submitting to the searching cross-examination of Attorney Cushing, even the torturous to which they had subjected her, back of all this was the plan of her attempt to prove by this ordeal itself that a woman who continued to love as this woman had, who had always sought reconciliation even after the most outrageous treatment, who had always refused to retaliate, even when it would have been easy, legal, when it was expected of her, that such a woman could never have planned deliberately to hire assassins to put him out of the way.

WARNED BY LAWYER.

In July, but a few weeks before the murder, when she was visiting the brother and sister of Dr. Mohr in Pennsylvania, new attempts at reconciliation were under way. She had been warned by her attorneys to be aware of pretended reform, to watch out for promises made only to be broken. But in spite of these warnings she was ready.

"I was always ready for a reconciliation," she said, in telling of these new overtures, "I was always ready, because I loved him."

Once or twice, during the questioning that was dragging out for public gaze her heart's most bitter secrets, she showed a flash of determination, a glimpse of the constant, almost obstinate fixity of purpose, which explained her love for Doctor Mohr.

She was asked if she had had any plots with the colored servants.

"I certainly did not," she exclaimed, her voice strengthening, carrying to the corners of the courtroom, and ringing out with unexpected vigor through the courtroom that was so tensely quiet that one could occasionally hear some person draw in his breath audibly, as if he had just remembered to breathe.

IMPRESSIVE RECITAL.

Not only did Mrs. Mohr's impressive recital of her love match in with every detail of the woman's appearance, but her characterization of Dr. Mohr by her story of his treatment matched in with the letter which he had written her.

In the tense atmosphere of that crowded courtroom, where her story so compelled sympathy that everyone seemed even to breathe in unison with her, that letter seemed satanic.

It looked even like contention courtesy of a date. It commenced brutally, insultingly "Madame." "Don't bother about the curtains," he wrote, "I don't want anything around that reminds me of you."

"If you ever put your foot in the place," he wrote, "I will kill you."

And then he had not been brutal enough, he filled the wound with salt, he smiled.

"When you come to town on some important business you can get your knife ready for they will be very useful to you when you are shifting for yourself. You may also have your leather pillow. Ta! Ta!" and he signed it "Charles, Sr."

The letter was written by Dr. Mohr. The words were Dr. Mohr's. And every word in that letter, every syllable of every word, pictured just the sort of man that would treat a woman as Mrs. Mohr said he had treated her. He himself, now dead, hailed, spoke out in that letter, confirming everything that Mrs. Mohr had told of his brutality, his coarseness, his cruelty.

Contrasted as it was with the picture of a woman whose love persisted through everything, that letter made it seem that if the writer could have had his way, he himself would have appeared in the manner of his end, granting only that it could bring as a result, still further trouble for the one who had been so persistently devoted.

LETTER MATCHES STORY.

That letter matched in every detail the story that Mrs. Mohr told of her mistreatment. The man who wrote that letter would certainly be a man who would beat his wife into insensibility because she failed to keep an appointment with him, because she had been at the bedside of her dying mother.

And the man who had been brutal enough, he filled the wound with salt, to ending:

"When you come to town on some important business you can get your knife ready for they will be very useful to you when you are shifting for yourself. You may also have your leather pillow. Ta! Ta!" and he signed it "Charles, Sr."

And the man who had been brutal enough to knock down a woman whom he found telephoning to her rival, he filled the wound with salt, he smiled.

It was just such a man as Mrs. Mohr described Dr. Mohr was. A man addicted to the use of drugs, intoxicating drinks, bad habits.

But in spite of that letter, in spite of those habits, in spite of everything, Mrs. Mohr's whole creed was bound up in the four words:

"Because I loved him."

"STORY WILL FREE WIDOW," MRS. FUTRELLE DECLARES

By MRS. JACQUES FUTRELLE.

Providence, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Elizabeth Frances Mohr is, at last, upon the witness stand. From her own lips we are hearing her story. It is the story of her life as the wife of Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, a man whom her lawyers have characterized as a menace to the community, and for whom absolute denial of her complicity in his death.

And I, too, seen in a jury box are listening to her, and it is my opinion they are listening to the truth. In my opinion they are going on believing her. Her story has the ring of truth to it. She is telling it frankly, openly, concealing nothing.

What is strange only in that a woman could have gone on for four years living with a man who was addicted to the use of drugs and alcohol, who neglected her, beat her; who was immoral and unfaithful, and that for that time aimed against the sacredness of wedlock. It is not a strange story, but it is a pitiful one.

THE OLD EXCUSE.

And the excuse this woman gives us for all that she has endured is as old as the world itself.

"I loved my husband."

Mrs. Mohr's appearance placed her upon the stand because she insisted upon it. She was not afraid. Vindication of the charges against her she felt could only come from the telling of her story by herself. And she was right. No one could tell her simple, pitiful story as she is telling it herself.

The prosecution rested its case after the adjournment, and Mrs. Mohr went upon the stand just after 3 o'clock. Previously she had almost suffered a collapse in the crowded courtroom. But she walked to the witness box, steadily, firmly, when her name was called.

She was pale, and her face, marked by sorrow, showed the strain of the last few weeks. Only her magnificent courage sustained her; her determination to go upon the stand. Many worries she has had lately, little things totally unconnected with the trial, but which sapped her strength when she had so much need of it.

AN APPEALING FIGURE.

She was constantly nervous while being sworn; her raised right hand tremuled visibly. It seemed to be but a momentary loss of the strangeness of her position rather than fear of it. Once she looked appealingly at her attorney, Mr. Cushing, who was prepared to question her. He was unaware of her glance. Her simple black dress which she has worn all during the trial looked more sombre than ever. Her expression at all times was patient.

She seemed very much alone there in the witness box, an appealing, compassionate little figure. No relative was there to sustain her; they are barred from the courtroom, as they are to be witnesses in her behalf.

She looked out upon a crowded room, a stilled, hushed throng eagerly awaiting her to speak. The air of the room was heavy, oppressive. The day had been a warm, sultry one, more like a day in early Summer than mid-Winter, the windows giving only a bit of relief.

Of late spectators have not been admitted except by card, and for especial reasons. Anticipating that Mrs. Mohr would take up upon the stand, Sheriff Andrew Wilcox gave orders that no women be admitted to the courtroom, only those whose business it was to be there. This order, however, was partially suspended to admit State officials and their wives, including the wives of many Senators.

SPOKE IN LOW TONE.

Mrs. Mohr was allowed to sit while telling her story. Her voice was so low at first—she instantly noticed—that that there was continual complaint from the jurors in general that she could not be heard. He continually insisted that the stenographer read aloud the questions and answers. If this were done on the part of the Attorney-General to get what he did not succeed. Many times she patiently repeated her answers, without the least sign of disturbance. Finally, however, Justice Sheldon appealed to her in her own interest to speak louder.

She smiled sadly and made the effort.

Her story was not new to me. I had it from her own lips more than six weeks ago, just as she is telling it on the stand today. And I would call it an explanation of the charges against her.

It is not the story of mad jealousy talked about, written about, fought about. All is find in it any trace of fury, of bitterness, of hate. It is surely lacking in recklessness and vengeance.

STORY OF DEVOTION.

Instead it is a story of devotion. A tale of forbearance by a woman toward her wayward husband that is as astonishing as it is unusual.

There is no doubt of the fullness of sympathy toward her. Today it swept like a wave over all in the courtroom, and I remembered what she said to me more than six weeks ago.

"I am innocent. I am not afraid of trial. I don't believe there are twelve citizens of Rhode Island who will doubt my story when I tell it."

I think she is right.

I don't believe you could put fifty men in a jury box in any State in the Union and convict Mrs. Mohr after the telling of her story.

I feel sure it is only a question of days until she will walk from the courtroom a free woman, vindicated in the eyes of the law, in the eyes of the world.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable glow and softness; but what will please you most of all, after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

How to Prevent Grippe and Pneumonia

A simple cough is really one of our best friends. It serves as a warning of inflammation in the throat, a condition is a dangerous place. Let a cough go neglected, however, and "wear itself out" and you are likely to have, first, most cases of Grippe, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and other serious throat and lung troubles come from a neglected cough or cold. The usual cough can usually be stopped in a few hours by taking Hyomei, and relief can often be ended in twenty-four hours by Hyomei. Hyomei is used in inhaler form; to dissolve slowly in the mouth every few minutes. General it is not the tickling throat irritation comes almost instantly relieved by Hyomei, which the juices of Cubbage reach the inflamed membranes. Then, night comes, you can respond readily to this pleasant treatment. Hyomei will soothe and relieve of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes the germ-laden mucus which causes them. As a treatment for coughs, colds, throat, lung and bronchial troubles Hyomei in tablet form is surely a wonder. Hyomei is guaranteed to relieve in any case where a package of Hyomei fails to stop a cough and end a cold. If you are subject to colds, coughs from any druggist on this liberal guarantee and get relief. Don't keep it cold away attitude. Be sure to insist upon Hyomei and take nothing in its place.—Advertisement.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will darken, grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair, and a brush application will cause a new revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Just buy the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, or ask your druggist for it, as easier way is to get the ready-to-use tea containing about 60 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur compound," thus avoiding a lot of mussy.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, yet it is a thing that adds years to youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Advertisement.

Curling Iron Kills Hair; New Method Improves It

Many a woman loses the silky, fluffy and brilliant appearance of her hair through habitual use of the hot curling iron. Certainly it does not look nice or good to dry up its natural oil, singe the fine out of it, taking it harsh, brittle and dull. And further, the unnecessary combing the use of that destructive instrument, the curling iron, can be entirely accomplished by applying plain liquid silmerine.

The use of this harmless product really preserves the life, lustre and beauty of the hair, and the curly and wavy effect is perfectly natural looking and stay-there lasting. If you've never tried it, by all means procure a few ounces from your druggist and use enough to moisten your hair from root to tip, putting it on with a clean tooth brush. The liquid silmerine is neither gummy nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use.—Advertisement.

'I Loved the Doctor, Knew That in His Heart He Loved Me,' Widow Testifies

"I STARTED SUITS TO BRING HIM TO SENSES"

VIGOROUSLY DENIES 'CONFESSION' OF TRIO

Mrs. Mohr then testified of a trip to McKeesville, Pa., in the latter part of June, 1915.

Q—Had Mr. Healis been to see you before you went to McKeesville? A.—I had seen him.

Q—Did you see him on the 4th of July when you returned? A.—No.

Q—Well, how soon after your return did you see him? Was it July 5th? A.—I saw him the next Tuesday.

Q—How soon after the 4th of July was that? A.—I knew he wanted to see me on the 10th. That was Saturday. But he was busy and could not see me then. He sent Henry Spellman to see me. I never met Spellman before that time.

SAW HEALIS

Q—Is what other occasion between that time and August 21 did you see Healis? A.—I would see Healis when I would go over to the doctor's to see my children. The first time I saw him after the incident to which you refer was when he came over to see me. He told me he was sent by the doctor to see our child, who had been ill. He wanted to find out for the doctor how the child was. I remember around July 1 he came over with tickets for the circus which the doctor had gotten for me and the children. He came over to the house and told me he wanted to take Charles down to Newport. I objected. I did not want Charles to go down because of the doctor's friends there. I did not want him there when Miss Burger was around. I told this to Healis and asked him to tell the doctor and to give that as my reason for not allowing Charles to go. I always wanted the children to be with me.

Q—Now, on the fifteenth of August did you visit Montpelier? A.—I did.

Q—Did you have occasion while there to talk with Victor Brown? A.—I did.

Q—Where did this talk take place? A.—I talked with him in the stable.

Q—What did you say to him? A.—I referred to the flowers.

Q—On your way down to Newport whom did you see? A.—While on the car in the Imperial Hotel I saw the doctor's son.

Q—Whom did you see in it? A.—I saw Martha Wilson, one of the servants. I did not see the doctor in person.

Mrs. Mohr then told of seeing John McAndrews and Cecil Victor Brown at Newport.

TALKED WITH BROWN.

Q—When was it you had the talk with Victor Brown? A.—That was the time I went into the stable.

Mrs. Mohr continued in a convincing way to tell how she had come to talk to Healis about bringing her son, Charles, down to Montpelier. Questioned about her conversation with Victor Brown in the stable, Mrs. Mohr said:

"I went over there to see the horses. I said to Vic Brown, 'Where are my three horses?' I would like to see them.' He said they were there in pasture. Then I inquired about my saddle. He pointed over to where the saddle was and said, 'There it is up there.' I said, 'Why haven't you got it covered? It's an expensive saddle.'

Q—Did you speak bitterly of the doctor? A.—The only way I expressed myself to Mr. Rooks was with tears. I asked him to do what he could for me and the father of my children.

Q—Did you say to Mr. Rooks that you hoped the doctor would be killed by an automobile, and that you prayed that he would be killed? A.—No. I told Mr. Rooks that I prayed the doctor would get out of one of his cases.

Attorney-General Rice here objected to the line of questioning, but was overruled by the court.

Q—Did you say you would kill Miss Burger so she wouldn't marry the doctor? A.—No. I knew the doctor would never marry Miss Burger.

Q—How did you know that? A.—From conversations I had with the doctor about Miss Burger.

Mrs. Mohr testified that the conversation she had with Mr. Rooks concerning money and the doctor dealt only with the small allowance which the doctor made for her. She said:

"I may have said I should receive more than I am getting."

Q—Did Miss Burger's brother, Henry say that you would lay his sister cold? A.—Never.

BOSTON INTERVIEW.

Q—Did you meet Mr. Rooks at the South station in Boston, and if so how did you come to meet him there? A.—He called me up and said he wanted to see me the next morning. I told him it was impossible, as I was going to Boston to take advantage of an early sale. He said that he would come out at the Boston station and as an added urge it was suggested to the doctor and Miss Burger if accompanied to me that I be asked me to take lunch with him and I told him "No," that I never had done anything like that and I never would. He told me, "Mrs. Mohr, that is where you make a great mistake. Your husband is going attorney-general

PRESIDENT IS BESIEGED BY WOMEN

New York, Jan. 27.—President Wilson capitulated today. After standing pat and refusing to see a delegation of the Congressional Union, who sought his aid in having a constitutional amendment granting women suffrage adopted, the President consented to see he women.

Several messages passed between the women leaders and Secretary Tumulty. The latter finally sent for Mrs. Amos Pinchot and informed her that President Wilson would see the ladies when it was convenient for them.

Mrs. Pinchot said: "Now is the time," and the women were ushered into the presence of the Chief Executive.

The news that the President had granted the interview, was received with much cheering and hand-clapping by the women who swarmed in the corridors of the Waldorf.

WILSON APOLOGIZES.

The women were with the President for about seven minutes. In receiving them, the President first apologized for keeping them waiting, saying that he did not know of any appointment.

As in former hearings, the President turned down the amendment proposition, saying that it was a matter for the States and not for the Federal government.

"I am convinced," he said, "that a matter of this kind should be worked out State by State. It is my opinion that this is the best and most solid way. I see no reason for discouragement on the part of you ladies who have worked so hard for suffrage. But it is a State issue. I am not against suffrage. That fact was demonstrated when I insisted it be my own State—New Jersey.

"The progress of the country becomes one of piece by piece building by our States. My mind on this suffrage question is still unchanged. I plan to have conferences with the leaders of my party on this question. I have not done so because matters of great importance that cannot wait forced me to put it off. I want to assure you again that I have not forgotten my promise nor shall I forget it."

MRS. DYER EXCITED.

Mrs. Tiffany Dyer started the speechmaking for the women. But she became too excited after the preliminary remarks and gave it up. Mrs. Henry Bruce White of the New York city chamberlain, followed: "We have come today to ask you to sponsor suffrage," she said. "We are insisting upon the granting of our demand for the amendment of the constitution to enfranchises women. It is logical and just.

DECLARE ACT OF TROOPERS 'HOSTILE'

following report of Major Anderson of the Twelfth Cavalry, stationed at Mercedes, which was forwarded by General Funston:

"Four men, Battery D, Fourth Field Artillery, swam across the Rio Grande while bathing in the river at Progreso, about 2.30 p. m. today.

"Two were made prisoners by two Mexicans with rifles and taken back into interior from river. Other two men of battery swam back; some two or three shots were fired at them while returning. Lieutenant J. F. Mort, commanding battery with Lieutenants Peyton and Wahiron, with about fourteen men of battery and one man Twelfth Cavalry, crossed river about three-quarters of an hour later, went about three-quarters of a mile back into interior from river, searched two houses, did not find comrades.

"They were fired upon ten or twelve times by men in brush. They remained on other side about one hour. When they returned the crossing was covered by our men on both of this side who fired some 200 shots. None of our men killed or wounded.

"Colonel Blockson has ordered Lieutenants Mort, Peyton and Wahiron to be placed in arrest, and Captain Mc-Broom, Twenty-eighth Infantry, has been placed in command of camp. I have directed Colonel Plummer, Twenty-eighth Infantry, to send one of his field officers to investigate.

"Mr. Garza, Mexican consul, has been informed of exact contents of Major Anderson's telegram and of arrest of the three officers concerned. He has gone to Matamoras to inform commanding general there and to ask that immediate search for Private Wheeler and Pederson be made. The Mexicans on other side were not in uniform."

Mrs. Florence Blake of Wollaston told Judge Fox that while Mrs. Voye was in her employ as housekeeper, the contents of a bottle of French brandy was missed and her physician condemned alcohol because water had been added. On another occasion Mrs. Voye threw meat into the sink.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Wahn, daughter of the couple, also testified.

GALLIVAN HITS 'PRO-BRITISH POLICY'

By the International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 27.—A bitter denunciation of "Pro-British propaganda" and a vigorous criticism of the United States' course in the European crisis was delivered in the House today by Representative Gallivan, a Massachusetts Democrat.

He declared that the United States should have followed the policy of "Watchful waiting" in Europe and of action in Mexico. He stirred the House to continued outbursts of applause.

The munitions embargo clouds, which have been hovering over the Senate for several days, broke into a deluge today when a mammoth petition for an embargo on arms, bearing over a million signatures, was presented.

Senators Hitchcock, Kenyon and Clark, with virile speeches, sought to have the Senate take immediate action. They bitterly scored munitions manufacturers, as engaging in a "damnable trade."

The petition was worked up by the organization of women for strict neutrality, with headquarters at Baltimore. It filled 21 huge waste baskets, and was in a thousand sections.

BREATHE FREELY! OPEN NOSTRILS AND STUFFED HEAD---END CATARRH

Instant Relief When Nose and Head Are Clogged from a Cold. Stops Nasty Catarrhal Discharges. Dull Headache Vanishes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle, anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; fullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head, catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleanding, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—Advertisement.

MISSING FLINT GIRL FOUND IN CAMBRIDGE

Thirteen-year-old May J. Flint of Arlington, who was believed to have been drowned in Spy Pond, was found early today asleep in a doorway at No. 100 Pacific street, Cambridgeport.

When found the girl had with her a bag filled with clothing. She said she had been wandering about the streets since Tuesday night. She was taken to Cambridge police headquarters and her family notified.

The Flint girl took her skates with her when she left home Tuesday afternoon, and after her disappearance it was feared that she had been drowned in Spy Pond. The pond was dragged by the Arlington police, and the finding of a handkerchief on the ice led to the belief that the body was in the water.

"I was not satisfied with conditions at home," Miss Flint told the police. "I made up my mind that I would leave, and go and get work. I was determined that I would never go back.

"Tuesday afternoon I left home with a bag of clothes, and my skates. I had a little money, and instead of going to Spy Pond I went to the Boston Common. I skated there until after dark, and then leaving my skates, I went and got something to eat.

"Tuesday night I wandered about for hours, and then went to sleep in a doorway. Yesterday I started to hunt for a job, but didn't find any. I got out to Cambridgeport last night and was so tired that I fell asleep in the doorway where the officer found me. It is not as easy to get work as I thought."

Officer Akerley of Station 2 noticed the girl sleeping in the doorway of L. C. Robinson at No. 100 Pacific street. He woke her up and took her to headquarters. She did not object to going home.

The Flint girl's parents are dead, and she makes her home with her uncle, Coll T. Flint, No. 58 Brantwood road, Arlington.

"Mama (Mrs. Flint) was out when I went away," said the girl, "and I did not have a chance to say goodby. If she wants me to I will go back, and I will never run away again."

Wife of Child, Noted Author, Seeks Divorce

Richard Washburn Child, lawyer and writer, graduate of Harvard and nephew of Charles Sumner Bird, has been sued in the Supreme Court of New York for a divorce by Mrs. Elizabeth Scott Child.

Mrs. Child's attorneys decline to discuss the case and refuse even to disclose the reasons that prompted the action.

It is understood that the co-respondent in the case is not named.

Mr. and Mrs. Child are well known in Boston society circles. Since their marriage they have lived in Beacon street and at Cohasset. The couple were married in 1904. His bride was one of the most talented women in Washington, D. C., at the time. She was later prominently identified with the Progressive party.

TWO ARRESTS IN RAID ON LYNN HOUSE

William R. Smith and Miss Violet A. Jerome, the latter an unusually comely brunette of nineteen years, were arrested in a police raid on a house on Forier street, Lynn, today, on joint charges of having administered illegal medical treatment to a woman and a girl now in Lynn Hospital.

They pleaded not guilty in Lynn court and were held in $2,000 bail each for continued hearings Saturday.

The police received a telephone call from the house last night for an ambulance to take a woman to the hospital. Officers accompanying the ambulance recognized Smith and recalled that a year ago a girl died in front of a house he was then occupying on Park street. An autopsy on that girl's body failed to reveal illegal medical practice, but the case remained in police memory.

The patient for whom the ambulance was called last night is Annie Gordon, thirty-five years old. The police say that Lynn Hospital surgeons found evidence of illegal treatment. She is in a serious condition.

Today Chief Inspector Thorne and Inspectors Kane and Donahue made a raid upon the house. They found a second patient there, a Greek girl of twenty-two years, very ill. She was hurried to the hospital, where her case was said to be similar to that of the Gordon woman, only more serious. The police say they found instruments in the house, which they took to the station with Smith and the Jerome girl. The latter, the police say, was Smith's assistant.

MARSHALL HOUSE AT YORK HARBOR BURNS

York Harbor, Me., Jan. 27.—The Marshall House, one of the largest and best known New England Summer hotels, has been burned to the ground. The loss is set at $200,000, and the cause of the fire is unknown.

The flames spread to two cottages, but were checked after they had damaged the roofs. The hotel was unoccupied except for the Perkins family, caretaker. Help, summoned from Portsmouth, N. H., and Biddeford, arrived too late to render practical assistance.

CARRY PROTEST ON ELEVATED TO GOVERNOR

Governor McCall gave a hearing at the State House today to a delegation from Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, Dorchester, Mattapan and other districts to the south of Boston, who asked for relief from transportation conditions now existing at the Dudley street terminal.

The changes urged today before the Governor have been set forth by the AMERICAN in its fight on behalf of the people for improved service by the Boston Elevated.

Representatives from every improvement association and civic body were present. The Boston Real Estate Exchange had a delegation there and Representatives were also among those who protested.

It was maintained that prospective changes ordered by the Public Service Commission including reconstruction of the east loop at Dudley street and the transfer of Mattapan lines to Eggleston square would not begin to solve the difficulty.

Governor McCall was appealed to—according to several of the speakers—"Because the Boston Elevated and the Massachusetts Public Service Commission have repeatedly refused to consider the comfort and convenience of the great mass of its patrons."

"REMOTE CHAIRMAN"

Forest D. Harrigan of the Upham's Corner Improvement Association was applauded by members of the delegation when he requested the Governor to remove the present chairman of the Public Service Commission, whom he termed as "not a fit person to stand between the people and the Elevated—a cold blooded proposition, indifferent and unsympathetic."

Victor A. Heath, vice-president of the Roxbury Board of Trade, was spokesman and outlined to the Governor the needs of the Dudley street district and the great relief which the terminal each day.

The Public Service Commission has ordered the Boston Elevated to improve its train service to and from the Dudley street terminal, to improve transfer facilities at the same point and to make other important changes to relieve the congestion at Dudley street and the overcrowding of cars in the Dorchester district.

The commission in regard to changes at Eggleston square directs the Elevated to use all reasonable diligence in undertaking the changes, with a view to the completion of the work within a period of six months.

The commission directs the company to make certain alterations in the Dudley street terminal structure and tracks, and orders a rearrangement of service on certain surface lines to facilitate the movement of traffic.

The commission estimates that 85,-000 passengers, both inbound and outbound, transfer daily at Dudley street, and that approximately 40 per cent of these transfer in the morning and evening rush hours.

These are the recommendations ordered, that the Boston Elevated Railway Company proceed to make the alterations hereinafter described at the east loop of the Dudley street terminal station.

The iron fence and other structures, except the stairways, in the central area, as well as the obstructions in the passageway leading to the northbound elevated platform, shall be removed. The area between the rails for a distance of at least eighteen inches from the gauge of the inside rail shall be covered with a planking level with the top of the rail. The stairway leading from the southerly footbridge to the incline shall be closed, so that outbound passengers shall use the stairways leading to the central area.

An indicator shall also be installed and operated during the evening rush hours, in order to show the berth at which each car shall stop.

At Dudley street the congestion is most acute at the east loop, says the Commission, where more than 40,000 passengers transfer daily in each direction. The commission declares certain objections made by the Elevated to proposed changes at the loop were not well founded, and says "that other objections can as well be urged against the present method of operation."

"It appears also," says the report, "that the congestion at Dudley street incident to the loading and unloading of passengers is aggravated by the overcrowding of the Elevated trains during the rush hours. The only immediate relief that seems possible is to increase the number of cars on each train. At the present time the company operates six-car trains during the morning rush hours and seven-car trains during the evening rush hours. As stated in the order accompanying this report, the company, at the suggestion of the commission, has agreed to operate seven-car trains during the morning rush hours and eight-car trains during the evening rush hours.

"Certain rearrangements of signals and other facilities are now being made in order to permit of the operation of eight-car trains, and it is expected that the new service will be in operation on and after February 5 of this year.

In regard to the proposed use of paper transfer checks at Dudley street, the commission says it finds no need for such a change. As to the proposed station at Dale street the commission says:

"It appears that the company is now furnishing reasonable service to the patrons of this line (on Washington street, at or near Dale street) except during the evening rush hours, but that additional cars should be provided between Dudley street and Eggleston square during the period from 4.45 p. m. to 6.30 p. m., to meet the present demands of travel during these hours."

MANY LIVES ARE MENACED BY FIREBUGS

The lives of two score persons were imperilled by three fires today in Roxbury, Chelsea and Revere. Firebugs are believed to have been responsible for two of them. Careless use of matches is blamed for the third. At the Revere fire nine children were carried out by three police officers, who also helped eight fathers and mothers out.

The Chelsea fire was in a six-flat house, Nos. 198-200 Congress avenue, owned by Antonio Mezzacoppi of No. 98 Highland street, Chelsea. The families of Fidelis De Voux and John Riley on the two ground-floor apartments were driven out. The four upper apartments are unoccupied.

This fire was in one of the second-floor flats. Firemen found three separate fires there, in the pantry, dining room and parlor. They also found oily waste and a five-gallon can filled with kerosene. The damage was kept down to $100. The police and fire officials are investigating.

Two alarms were sounded for the Revere fire, which was in a six-flat house, No. 29 Highland street. It started in an unoccupied flat on the ground floor. Deputy Fire Chief George C. Smith of Revere said:

"The fire was of incendiary origin. I shall notify the State police and shall conduct an investigation myself. I figure the damage at $1,500."

The house is owned by a Boston man named Cohen. Four of the six flats are occupied. Sergeant Charles O. Walton and Patrolmen Frank McLoughlin and John Starkey fought their way into the house through smoke for four separate rescue trips. They carried and helped out Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Strikowsky and two children, Miss Jennie Lobster and three children, Mr. and Mrs. Max Segal and one child and Mr. and Mrs. John Richmond and three children.

The Roxbury fire was in the basement of Charles S. Handy's lodging house at No. 123 Dudley street. Twenty lodgers were driven out. Firemen set the damage at $100.

SUSPECT ELECTRIC POLE KILLED MAN

Alden Gould, twenty-five, of Newton Junction, N. H., a freight brakeman on the Boston & Maine Railroad, was found dead under peculiar circumstances early today about half way between the Revere railroad station and the stairs leading up to the street.

He was found lying at the foot of an electric light pole.

An autopsy will be held to see whether he was killed by electricity, as it is believed the pole was charged.

New British Loan Predicted by Sir Felix Schuster

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 27.—Sir Felix Schuster, the foremost financial authority in England, reviewing the financial situation at the Union of London Bank meeting today, said:

"London's place in the world as an international banking centre is threatened—only temporarily, I hope—by the United States. It can only be retained if confidence in the maintenance of our exchanges on a gold basis remains unshaken."

Sir Felix, however, declared that the British gold reserve of nearly $160,000,000, not counting that held by banks and in circulation, affords proof of the country's strength.

REPORT 15,000 BRITISH KILLED IN ARABIA

By International News Service.

Berlin (by wireless), Jan. 27.—The Cologne Volkszeitung publishes a dispatch from Cairo, dated December 20, stating that the British troops in Southern Arabia have lost 15,000 killed and 20,000 wounded, while the 20,000 soldiers left at Aden are in a dangerous position.

"The British are defending themselves desperately against the Arabs and Turks," the despatch adds. "A wounded British major declared that at the beginning of the war the British occupied 250,000 square kilometers (155,000 square miles) in Southern Arabia and Yemen, but that this has all been lost.

"All the Arab sheiks have transferred their allegiance to the Turks and are now successfully using the arms given to them by the British to use against the Ottoman forces."

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or, rather, ferments the same as food left to spoil in open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by Hyper-Acidity, meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach, much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up sour, wry eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing, and, further more, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making poisons from the liver, stimulate the kidneys, and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—Advertisement.

PIMPLES COVERED BABY'S HEAD

Became One Scale Which Was Awful to Look At. Burning and Itching All the Time. Began on Body.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"Baby was five days old when I first noticed that her head was covered with red pimples. The heat soon became one scale which was awful to look at. She cried and lay awake trying to get at it, it was burning and itching so all the time. After a while it began to break out on her body. My baby was an awful looking sight.

"Baby was a sufferer for six weeks before I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and her body and head were disfigured with scales. In a few days my baby was well all over." (Signed) Mrs. R. E. Bledsoe, R. F. D. No. 2, Shelburne Harbor, Vt., July 1, 1915.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be easily made at trifling expense by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—Advertisement.

WAR SUMMARY

London announces that hereafter French warships will assist the British fleet on blockade service. The announcement is especially significant because it comes so closely after the debate on the blockade question in the Commons.

Sir Edward Grey told the Commons that all that could be done was being done, but the opponents of the Ministry showed in the debate, and the opposition papers make plain in their editorials today, that "what is being done" is not enough.

In view of the addition of the French to the British fleet for blockade duty, it seems probable that more stringent measures will hereafter be taken.

If England declares an actual "blockade" of Germany, and if she undertakes to make that blockade legal, she must control the Baltic, as well as the North Sea. A blockade, to be legal, must be "effective," and it must "apply equally to all countries." The present "blockade" is not even reasonably effective, nor does it apply equally to all countries, because trade between Sweden and Germany across the Baltic is practically uninterrupted.

SWEDEN IN BAD TEMPER

Instead of cutting off this trade England has "blockaded" Sweden and the rest of Scandinavia, with the result that Sweden is in a bad temper, and more stringent measures may quite easily precipitate Sweden into the war.

The British expedition in Mesopotamia, according to Turkish and German reports, is having an unpleasant time of it, losing heavily, and in danger of utter destruction. The only official British utterance of the day was a correction of a previous bulletin. The previous bulletin said the British relief force was within seven miles of the besieged. The correction says the distance should have been stated as twenty-three miles, instead of seven.

Internally, Britain is becoming more harmonious. The conscription bill has passed the Lords and the King's signature will make it law. Labor, at a Bristol conference, has voted overwhelmingly against compulsory military service, but also to support the government in conducting the war.

GERMAN DRIVE FAILS

The German "drive" in northern France against Calais has failed—for the present at least. Successes were of minor importance. The Austrians won a small success over the Italians, and Austria announces Montenegro has finally formally surrendered. Two hundred thousand Austrians are invading Albania, where—at Durazzo—the allies seem to plan to make a stand.

London anticipates another air raid. Police warnings have been issued advising all, in case of a raid, to stay indoors and avoid falling shell fragments.

In response to questions as to the new German seventeen-inch naval guns, Balfour told the Commons that "every dockyard at home and in the Mediterranean is being used by ourselves or our allies," and that all possible is being done to meet any German move.

'REAL' BLOCKADE QUESTION IS PUT OFF

By FRANK TEWSON,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Jan. 27.—British leaders who have opposed the establishment of a blockade because of the effect it would have on neutral nations expressed high approval today of the action of the government in staving off any action that might further alienate the sympathy of non-belligerents. They declared that the question of a blockade was for the time being, at least, relegated to the background.

The criticism that has recently been levelled at the foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, was noticeably lessened as a result of the masterly way in which he handled the blockade issue for the government.

Parliamentary advocates of a blockade that would strangle Germany admit that Sir Edward has declared their desires, and that after his exposition of the difficulties connected with the establishment of such a commerce-destroying cordon it would be impossible to bring up the matter again in the near future with any chance of success.

The anti-government press headed by the Northcliffe papers says that "For the time being consideration of the interests of neutral nations has again defeated the measure that was needed to make Britain a sure winner in the war." The opposition newspapers condemn Sir Edward Grey in sharp editorial utterances.

With the matter left just where it was when A. S. Bonn, a Unionist member, introduced his blockade resolution, and Sir Edward Grey stated the government's position, the blockade question will probably not again issue.

Assailants of the government are confident that the passive or effective weapon with which to attack the Asquith cabinet, and will proceed to make the most of their opportunity.

Unionist observers predicted today that the bitter campaign against the government which has been waged for many months would increase in vigor. The opponents of the ministry claim to have a popular issue upon which to base their fight. A blockade, they declare, would accomplish more than could be done by the great military force that would be raised by conscription and might possibly avert the necessity for compulsory military service.

LUSITANIA CASE SETTLEMENT UP TO BERLIN

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 27.—In German diplomatic circles the view was expressed today that the settlement of the Lusitania controversy cannot be expected before the end of next week. Emphatic denial was made that Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, has knowledge of what Germany's reply will be.

The final version of the German reply, in the only form which will satisfy the United States, has been cabled by Count von Bernstorff to his government. Its receipt in Berlin, it was explained, cannon be expected before Saturday, owing to extraordinary delays and the circuitous route messages to Berlin must follow.

It is considered certain that the government of Germany will not arrive at a decision before Tuesday or Wednesday of next week and that the reply in its final form cannot reach Washington before Friday or Saturday.

BRITISH LABOR VOTES AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

By SYDNEY B. CAVE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Bristol, Eng., Jan. 27.—By the overwhelming majority of 1,577,000, the Trades Union Conference in session here today adopted resolutions opposing compulsory military service in Great Britain. The vote on the resolution was as follows:

Against conscription..... 1,764,000
For conscription..... 210,000

The announcement of the result of the ballot was greeted with cheers which lasted for five minutes.

FOREGONE CONCLUSION.

Though the conference yesterday adopted resolutions pledging its support to the government in prosecuting the war in a successful conclusion, its position in condemning compulsory military service was a foregone conclusion from the time the meetings began here.

The delegates representing all branches of English labor were determined to show their opposition to conscription, even in the modified form proposed by Premier Asquith and his cabinet colleagues. Several speakers opposed the resolutions and urged the delegates, representing more than 2,000,000 workers, to support the government or, at least, refrain from active opposition.

William R. Anderson, president of the conference and a member of Parliament from the Attercliffe division of Sheffield, led the fight for the resolutions.

OPPOSES COMPROMISE.

He declared proposals for compromise were "worse than useless" and that the interests of labor demanded firm opposition "to any movement savoring of conscription."

Delegates who had been unable to get here for the Wednesday session arrived today. Most of the late arrivals were opponents of conscription. Delegates representing several thousand workers refrained from voting today.

The ballot on the anti-conscription resolutions brought out 2,015,000 votes. In two ballots on different resolutions yesterday there were respectively 2,053,000 and 2,194,000 votes.

MONTENEGRO AGAIN YIELDS TO AUSTRIA

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 27. — Montenegro's second capitulation is announced by the Austrian government.

Delegates of the Montenegrin government at 6 o'clock Tuesday night signed articles for the laying down of the arms of the remnants of King Nicholas' forces, according to the announcement first made by Austro-Hungarian headquarters.

The statement adds that disarmament is proceeding without difficulty and has extended to the districts of Kolasin and Andrigevica.

The rebels were completely routed in the conflict numbered 60,000 men. The rebels were completely routed.

FEELS IT A DUTY TO RELATE FACTS

Hancock Street Man Relates How He Was Cured of Catarrh by Plant Juice.

Ninety per cent. of the ill-health of today is due to the stomach. The stomach, since its chronic derangement is nothing but the body self-poisoning of the vital organs of the body. When the stomach fluid grows weak and unhealthy, the food remains too long in the stomach and ferments, forming foul, poisonous gases, which produce a fullness or bloating sometimes causing an unpleasant pressure under the heart, and causing fear of heart disease. Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic, acts as a combination that strikes directly at these troubles, and helps to eliminate them. This is why what Plant Juice is doing is being endorsed every day by the numerous testimonials received from people who have given Plant Juice a fair trial.

Mr. Fred Carter of No. 5 Hancock Street, who has lived in Boston for the past 15 years, tells in the following signed statement how he was relieved of a bad case of stomach trouble by Plant Juice. He says:

"For 4 years I have suffered from catarrh of the stomach and head. My food fermented in my stomach and caused gas, and I suffered greatly after eating. I had headaches, dizzy spells, my liver was all run down, I was badly constipated, and was so nervous I could not sleep at night. I had no appetite and nothing tasted good to me. My head was so bad that I lost all sense of smell, and was entirely miserable. I took lots of other medicines I had tried did me no good whatever, and the only relief I got was when I started to take Plant Juice. After taking 2 bottles I am entirely cured of the catarrh, sleep well and have no more pains or aches. I can eat any kind of food now, and digest it. Plant Juice did the work for me and I am only too glad to recommend it to others."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Co.'s store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and interviewing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement and Russian armies. Between those upper and nether millstones, millions of Jews have been squeezed and ground to ruin. Five hundred thousand, accustomed to persecution at the hands of the Russians, have joined the Russian army and fight bravely, and even die, for those they hated.

Great Campaign for the Relief of Jewish War Sufferers Is On in Boston

Opportunity to Aid Millions of Helpless, Shelterless, Starving Non-Combatants.

They have seen their homes destroyed, their property vanish, their families separated and scattered in the hands of refugees that are wanderers today in the devastated provinces.

As a result of the war famine and disease followed. Many are victims of disease because they have been compelled to partake of any kind of food or starve to death.

ALL ARE URGED TO AID FUND.

The greatest cause of this dire destitution and call in most pitiful tones for a piece of bread for the starving women and children or cry for shelter from the frosts and snows of a cold winter, is the devastation caused in the sections of the warring countries in which the hostilities actually take place.

The Jewish war relief day plan as proclaimed by President Wilson offers practically every man, woman and child in Boston an opportunity to make a sacrifice—to give up some of its luxuries and good things of life for a single day—in order to help a man and child in the war zone who would starve unless they are given aid.

MIS MEETING TONIGHT.

To afford as great a measure of relief as possible, acting under the proclamation of President Wilson and the supplementary proclamation of Governor McCall, Boston's leading citizens co-operated with the New England branch of the American Jewish Relief Committee and the People's Relief Committee, to raise as much a fund as possible.

Very creed and kindred will be represented at the mass meeting which will assemble at the Tremont Temple tonight at the call of Boston leading citizens.

The meeting tonight is the actual beginning of a great campaign for suffering humanity. The most prominent and representative citizens are expected to be present.

Speakers of national and international fame will deliver addresses telling of the sufferings and persecutions of the Jews in Europe.

Governor McCall will be the principal speaker. He will be followed by Mayor Curley, A. C. Hatsheisky, president of the Federation of Jewish Charities of Boston; Mary Antin, Dr. Harry Levi of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue; Rabbi M. M. Eichler and others.

PROMINENT MEN TO ATTEND.

Other prominent citizens who have been invited to address the gathering include Cardinal O'Connell, Bishop Lawrence, the Rev. Charles F. Dole and Senator Weeks.

Among the prominent members of the committee in charge of the meeting who will occupy seats on the platform are Robert G. Dun, Adams, 2d, George E. Brock, Henry V. Cunningham, former Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing, Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard University; Thomas N. Fitzpatrick, William A. Gaston, Major Henry L. Higginson, Louis K. Liggett, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; John F. Moors, James J. Storrow, A. Shuman and Bernard J. Rothwell. David A. Ellis, former chairman of the Boston School Committee, will preside.

Similar meetings will be held tonight in every city and town throughout the State.

The meetings are for the purpose of acquainting all the American people with the situation of the Jews, with the unfathomable misery and distress in certain warring countries.

GIRLS TO SELL BUTTONS.

Following the New York precedent, the recent Carnegie Hall meeting, at which $100,000 approximately $1,000,000 was raised, the meeting in Tremont Temple is intended to concentrate the feeling and effort of the people of this city in behalf of the Jewish war sufferers.

Actuated by a common desire to do all they can for their fellow co-religionists, every Jewish organization of this city joined in the work today.

Thousands of young men and pretty young girls were seen today in every part of the city selling little Jewish relief buttons. The volunteer workers were supplied with small tin boxes, which they will carry into office buildings and industrial establishments asking contributions of anything from a penny up.

These persons wore arm bands and credentials to show that they represent the local relief committee.

Those persons who could not reach a collection box or for any reason were unable to be in the city at that time made their donations by sending a check or cash to A. Rosenland of No. 101 Summer street, Boston.

STORIES OF GREAT HEROISM OF JEWS COME IN REPORTS OF WAR

By ALEXANDER BRIN.

When the great war passes into history, one of the noblest episodes to be written will be the part played by the Jews when Europe's map was being changed and civilization received its greatest set-back of modern times.

Glorious as this chapter will be, an undertone of pathos will run through it. For it will tell of a race with no land of its own to fight for, of a race which threw itself for whatever flag it happened to be, loyal with the Maccabean spirit of 2,000 years ago.

Yet of all the sickening horror of war a ray or light has come to the Jews. They have proved their worth as first-class fighting men to the world, a fact that needed no proof to students of ancient history, familiar with the martial glories of the Hebrew race.

The old spirit that flourished before Christ has blossomed again. Though ostensibly a man of peace, the Jew has demonstrated that when the time comes he can fight, and fight hard. He has earned his place in the foremost battleline of any army in the world.

800,000 JEWS UNDER ARMS.

Nearly 800,000 Jews have already taken part in the war. From every engagement, back to the day eighteen months ago, when the great, gray cloud of Germans marched through Belgium, down to the present time, the Jew has done his share.

From every battlefield, whether France or Belgium, in East Prussia or in Poland, in Galicia, Servia or the Dardanelles, wonderful stories of Jewish heroism have filtered through the news channels to be flashed around the world.

Always wanderers, the war has united many Jews. Brothers long since separated have met in hand-to-hand conflict in the trenches. Jews who left their home in Poland and Galicia years ago, returned for the first time with the German army to make war on their relatives who stayed behind in the old home.

Victoria Crosses, Iron Crosses, St. George Crosses, Crosses of the Legion of Honor, Distinguished Conduct Medals and all the decorations that are awarded for bravery of a rare form have been showered on the Jews.

Naturally enough, there are more Jews serving in the Russian army than in all the other armies of Europe. For the Jew has a stake in all it is there. And under the colors of the great white czar, half a million are fighting.

FIGHTING UNDER EVERY FLAG.

Austria-Hungary comes next in the list, where, when the roll is called, 300,000 Jews answer for the names. Her great ally, Germany, is glad to number 75,000 Jews in her wonderful armies; Great Britain has 25,000, France 20,000, Italy 10,000, Bulgaria 3,000, Turkey 10,000, Italy 2,500 and little Belgium 2,000.

Even from Morocco and Tripoli come Jewish troops and 2 per cent. of the hard fighting Zouaves are Hebrews.

If all the Jews now engaged in the war were fighting together they would form an army of well over 900,000 men, which, before the present struggle began, would form in itself the greatest army in history.

But figures in themselves mean little. If the war has done nothing else, it has taught us to judge carelessly tremendous numbers, whether in forces of troops, casualties or money.

Take the case of Great Britain, for example, as an illustration of the part the Jews are playing in the war. There, we find, that according to the latest available figures, 25,000 Jews are serving in the army. Not especially impressive in itself, perhaps, but 25,000 represent eight per cent. of the available Jews in the Empire, and if eight per cent of the general population had responded, conscription in England would still be some distance away.

LOYAL EVEN TO CZAR.

The same proportion holds true in other nations. Even in Russia, the loyalty of the Jews has been one of the many surprises of the war.

For individual valor the Jew has won far more than his proportionate share of medals and glory. Thus, the comparatively little band of 25,000 Jews serving in the British forces, about 100th part of the total strength, have won forty "V. C.'s," or "D. S. O.s," three "D. S. Os," and three distinguished crosses. A large number have won commissions.

A fine showing this, for King George, following in the footsteps of his predecessors, does not bestow his military honors lightly. To illustrate this point, it is well to study a little the history of the "V. C.," one of the most highly valued military medals in the entire world.

The little bronze "Victoria Crosses," made from the cannon captured at Sebastopol, with their legend "For conspicuous gallantry" has been awarded to the number of 186 since the war began. But 78 were won during the entire Boer War, and but 111 during the Crimean War.

MANY REWARDED FOR VALOR.

The first Jew in history to win a Victoria Cross was Lieutenant Frank de Pass, Thirty-Fourth King Alberts Own Poonh Horse, Indian cavalry, who distinguished himself by rescuing several comrades under heavy fire.

Lieutenant de Pass did not live to receive his honor. The priceless cross, with a personal note from King George, was sent to the family on the last trouble to be given a here.

Sergeant Issy Jacobs of the First Battalion, Manchester Regiment, also received the cross at the hands of his King after having distinguished himself early in the war, risking his own life to save an officer. He was badly injured, and for several weeks his life was despaired of. He has also received from the King the Cross of the Order of St. George, fourth class.

Third on the list to rank with the great British heroes in this history was Private Leonard Keysor, First Battalion, Austrian Imperial Force.

It was in the Long Tom trenches in the Gallipoli Peninsula that Keysor won his spurs. His bench as heavily bombarded by the enemy. Himself wounded, he picked up the hand grenades as they landed, and before they had a chance to explode, sent them flying back to the enemy lines.

That was on August 5. That same bombardment was renewed the next day, and Keysor, although badly wounded, that he was advised to retire, kept his post and by nerve and exceptional skill in throwing the grenades, not only held his own trench, but proved of great assistance to his comrades on some distance away.

Sometime later, on his return to London, he was given the greatest honor in the gift of his country, when King George pinned the little "V. C." to his coat.

In Germany a similar story holds true. In proof of the spirit of loyalty the Jews showed to their adopted country, read the following proclamation issued jointly by the two leading Jewish organizations in the country, when war was declared:

To the German Jews—In the solemn hour of its destiny the Fatherland calls its sons to the flag. That every German Jew is prepared to make the sacrifices of blood and treasure demanded by duty is something that may be taken for granted.

Men of Israel! We summon you to devote all your forces even beyond the limits of duty to the service of the Fatherland by your personal services and by donations of money and goods.

3,000 WIN IRON CROSSES.

How well the spirit of this declaration has been obeyed subsequent history has shown. Thousands of Jews flocked at once to the colors, leaving their personal affairs and business to care for itself as long as their country needed their services.

More than 75,000 Jews are now enrolled in the German army. They have had their full share in her triumphs and defeats alike, and have met with nothing but praise for their commanding officers.

Three thousand iron crosses have been given to Jews serving in the German army, and many of them have been for the highest order of valor.

Germany is more lavish with her medals of honor than is Great Britain, though the highest order of the iron cross ranks in significance with the British "V. C."

In Germany there is a Jewish Student organization which counts 850 members and whose object is the study and promotion of Jewish ideals and ideals.

STUDENTS FIGHT BRAVELY.

This organization has at present 228 of its constituents in the field of battle. Of this number, the official records show, 100 have received the iron cross, 114 have been given various other decorations and distinctions for bravery, while eleven were made Prussian officers, and two have been promoted to the rank of officer in a Bavarian regiment.

Three hundred and fifty Jews who have enlisted as privates to serve Germany have advanced to the rank of officer. The Jews who, by old age or disability are unavailable for duty have done their part as loyally as the soldiers in the field.

Thus we find the German ledge of the B'na Brith has, at great expense, fitted out a hospital train, acknowledged by military experts to be almost perfect in its completeness and appointments, which was presented to the authorities to be used for all German soldiers, irrespective of race or religion.

Across the border, where thousands of Jews are fighting somewhere in France, the Jews are bearing their share of the burden loyally and bravely.

SPIRIT OF DREYFUS.

They have contributed their share of ranking officers in addition to the men in the ranks. Prominent among these are General Heyman and General Valabregue, each of whom is in command of an army corps.

And to select a more famous name, we have Major Alfred Dreyfus, persecuted and imprisoned by France a few years ago, who, in spite of all he had suffered, offered his sword and services to his country as soon as war was declared.

The history of the Dreyfus case, once the talk of all the world, is still too fresh enough in everyone's mind to need repetition. Accused of selling documentary secrets, publicly degraded, imprisoned for five years—and finally proved to be innocent of all the charges against him—France gives us no finer picture of loyalty than that of Major Dreyfus in charge of the fort that guards the great road over which the invaders must pass to reach Paris.

Thus as Alfred Dreyfus' spirit has been, that he has not the only member of the family who has proved his loyalty to France, and perhaps in all that history there is no more striking proof that has better cause to have a feeling of bitterness against the land in which they live.

SON HONORED FOR HEROISM.

A son has served with such distinction that he has been honored with various medals and has risen rapidly in the ranks. Other soldiers of France who answer to the name of Dreyfus have served their country well during the eighteen months of war.

One of the most pleasant features of the war is the fact that in France, at least, and probably in the other nations as well, racial and religious lines have been broken down to a great extent, and much friendlier feeling exists between them than ever before.

The relationship between the rabbis, the Catholic priests and the Protestant ministers who are serving as chaplains, is of the most friendly nature. At Verdun, a joint service for fallen soldiers was held last December, at which time the rabbi first read prayers in Hebrew, the Catholic priest in Latin and the Protestant minister in French.

And the death of Chief Rabbi Bloch of Lyons, who breathed his last as he was passing a cruchfix to a dying French soldier, has already gone down into history.

A Jewish religious seminary in Paris is closed today and has been for many months. The reason is because the entire student body has gone to war, transferring its allegiance for the time being from the Talmud to the sword and hand-grenade.

From Russia we get the following tribute to the Jew from the Vice-Governor of Kovno:

"The Jewish bravery astonished us all and the heroism of the Russian Jew has become a household word. In the fighting I have seen there have been no finer evidences of heroism than those manifested by the Jews."

Turning to Austria we find that up to the end of the year, the Jews have won 611 medals and crosses. And there is the now famous dying statement of the young Jew in France who said, "I give my life for the victory of France and the peace of the world."

From Belgium comes the story of the medical student who went the colors of his regiment during a terrific engagement. His name was Ornas, his name was Ornas, this young Hebrew, and he was a student at the medical college in Ulm when the call to the colors came.

He was one of the first to respond and shortly afterward got the chance to climb up into the sun with the heroes. The colors of his regiment were shot down, and with their fall, the morale of the troops seemed to go. Disorganized in the shower of shots, Ornas dashed from the trenches, picked up the flag and turned it over to his superior officers. Then he fell. When he was picked up he was found to be badly wounded and was taken to a field hospital. He recovered and was awarded the cross of St. George.

In no other place has the loyalty of the Jews been more decisively proved than in Russia, perhaps the last country in the world where Jewish loyalty might be expected.

Individual cases of heroism, though these are plenty enough, are not needed to show the spirit of the Jews. From the time of the shooting of a prince by a madman flashed all Europe into flame, down to today, there is no more splendid picture of patriotism than that shout of 5,000 leading Jews in Petrograd. "There are no Jews or Gentiles now."

With the Crown Rabbi at their head, the 5,000 Jews marched from the Grand Synagogue to the palace of the Czar, singing Hebrew hymns and Russian national airs, shouting as they marched along: "There are no Jews or Gentiles now." The loyalty of the Jews had been proved since the war began.

Another splendid tribute was that furnished by the Highlander, an officer in the famous Black Watch Regiment, which has on its record more than that of any body of fighting men in the world. Proud of their centuries of honorable history are these men of the North, and here, as in all other troops, the Jews helped to add to their glory.

The little tin box carried by each collector of the Jewish relief fund today.

BANISHED HIS DESIRE FOR TOBACCO

A Kansas Man Tells of a Simple Home Recipe That Broke Him of Using Tobacco.

Mr. John Miller, living at Waverly, Kas., after using tobacco 20 years, banished his desire for tobacco with a simple recipe which he mixed at home. In a recent statement Mr. Miller said: "I could not stop tobacco of my own accord, so used the following simple recipe almost two years ago and have not touched tobacco since. To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound, and 1 oz. of Fluid Extract. Take a teaspoonful three times a day. As it has no color or smell it can be given secretly in tea, coffee, milk or in food. Any druggist can fill this recipe at very little cost, and it certainly will banish all desire for tobacco."

DECLARES SHAW SAID HE 'LIKED THE GIRLS'

more fish for me!" This was the most dramatic incident told at the hearing.

Ruth Davis, an attractive young woman and the first witness, accused Shaw of once having put a girl in solitary confinement because she had "smiled at him." She said she had heard Shaw say he "liked girls," and claimed she had "once smelled liquor on the commissioner."

"You treat Papa right and Papa will treat you right," she declared Shaw had said to her one day.

She said she had heard Carlton L. Brett, the deposed master of the House of Correction, at Deer Island, say to Shaw: "I am glad you are here to put the 'Babes in the Wood.'" She explained this phrase as meaning solitary confinement, and claimed Shaw had replied: "None of them is too big for me to handle."

The girl was put on the stand after Attorney William B. Scharton, whose petition for the removal of Commissioner Shaw led to the hearing, had clashed with Mayor Curley over the lawyer's attempt to have Shaw made the first witness. This request the Mayor turned down. Scharton used the words:

SPECTATORS BARRED.

"Of course, if you attach a whitewash proceeding, that is different; but I do not propose to be limited to the rules of evidence. I want all the facts."

The hearing opened in the old Aldermanic chamber, and the only witnesses and newspaper men were admitted, the throng of would be spectators being kept out in the corridors. Shaw had inquiry or more witnesses present, and was represented by Counsel Attorney Alvah A. Sleeper. Scharton had four young women and several men witnesses. Near Mayor Curley sat Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan.

Scharton's petition accuses the commissioner of cruelty to prisoners, including women, of mismanagement, and makes other charges.

"Proceed, Mr. Scharton," said the Mayor, and the hearing began.

Scharton, At the outset, I would suggest this hearing be transferred to Deer Island.

Mayor: Proceed with your evidence, and if it warrants I shall order such a transfer.

Scharton: My evidence, Your Honor, is largely documentary today. I have a letter here from George Steele, at present an inmate at the State Prison in Charlestown. The letter was first sent to Councillor Ballantyne, who is in the room here. It involves the names of eight or ten witnesses who have suffered at the hands of Mr. Shaw. Now if you are willing to accept this letter and others as evidence well and good. But I repeat my demand that the hearing should be held at Deer Island, where officials and prisoners may be examined without influence of commissioners and without fear filling their souls.

REQUEST REFUSED.

Mayor: Mr. Shaw will not be a witness at this time; he is not your witness.

Scharton: You will observe, Mr. Mayor, that in my petition I have requested the right to examine Commissioner Shaw. Do you now refuse my demand?

Mayor: I do.

Scharton: Very well, then, I will leave it to the judgment of those present in this room whether that is a fair ruling, and I shall proceed with the case as best I can alone.

Attorney Scharton then read his petition, which contained his charges against Penal Commissioner Shaw for alleged unfair treatment of prisoners, and asked his removal on the ground that he was not temperamentally fit for the position. Scharton introduced his first witness, Ruth Davis, an attractive brunette of 22, who gave her occupation as "maid" and her present address was No. 3 Allston street, West End.

Commissioner Shaw said to me one day, 'You treat Papa right, and Papa will treat you right,' she declared.

Q.—What did you gather from that remark? A.—That any another remark that he might make to me, to feel that he was interested in girls.

In response to questions by Attorney Scharton she explained:

"I heard Master Brett say to the commissioner one day: 'I am glad you are here to do the dirty work, and to put the 'Babes in the Wood.' That meant in solitary. Commissioner Shaw answered: 'None of them is too big for me to handle.' Mr. Brett said, 'They would be sore on me if I did it.'"

Under cross-examination the witness said that although she smelled liquor on Shaw she smelled Brett, she never saw them in the act of drinking.

Q.—And you claimed you smelled liquor from Mr. Shaw and Mr. Brett that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mr. Brett's family present? A.—Yes.

TELLS OF "SOLITARY."

Mrs. Mary Williams, colored, of Piedmont street, South End, was the next witness. She said she was sentenced to Deer Island July 31, 1915, and that she served six days in solitary; that she was taken out on the sixth day from 10 in the morning until 7 p. m., and then put back in solitary for three more days. The first time was because Johnson stuff had been found on her in the laundry; the second time was when she tried to get a letter to her husband.

Attorney Scharton emphasized the fact that under the law the limit for solitary confinement was three days.

Q.—What food did you get while in solitary? A.—A can of water and a slice of bread every morning at seven o'clock.

Q.—Was that all you got in the day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you ever taken out for any purpose during the first six days? A.—No.

Q.—Were you ever assaulted? A.—Yes. By Mr. Brett; he struck me on the cheek, and dragged and beat me. He wanted me to strip in his presence; he said he thought I was hiding a knife. I told him I would not strip unless he went away, but finally I had to. And when I did, I ran into my cell.

CELL PITCH DARK.

Q.—What did they want you to strip for? A.—To look for the knife they thought I had. The solitary cell had no window, and was pitch dark; there was a little airhole, which Master Brett had covered up, so I had to pick out a little airhole in the door with my knife, or I would have gone crazy. When I refused to strip in front of Master Brett, he said: 'You'll take your clothes off, woman, or I'll take them off for you.'

Mrs. Ida Scott, thirty-five years old, was the next witness. She said she was sentenced to Deer Island on a suspended drunkenness charge for six months, but was paroled. She said she served six days in solitary, with only a half slice of dry bread and a quart of water daily. She said she heard Master Brett assaulting Mary Williams in the next cell, and added:

"Miss Carney and Julia Rogers were put in dark solitary; Julia Rogers was taken away to an insane asylum. Mary Carney was taken out half dead. Mr. Shaw was there when they took out Mary Carney. Master Brett ordered her to be sent to the sewing room for a sun bath.

Q.—After she was half dead? A.—Yes, after she was half dead. They carried her out on a stretcher.

IN "SOLITARY" TEN DAYS.

Abe Shapiro said he was sentenced to Deer Island in March, 1915, for passing drugs.

"I was placed in solitary ten days," he said. "They put in a small cell without a bit of light; and got only a can of water and a slice of bread every morning. I was the first taken out once during those ten days for a bath or anything else.

"On the ninth day Councillor Coleman came down with the other city councillors; I asked him if he wouldn't get me out of the dark cell. Commissioner Shaw was with them. He said: 'Oh, are you in here?' How did you break in?' After the councillors went he came in and said to me, 'I was only intending to spit on me: 'What do you mean by trying to get outsiders to help you? I'll make you sorry a month seem to you as if they were six years.'

"After he went out Officer Foley came in with a club and told me to lie down or he would knock me down. Officer Carney knocked down James Howard in the next cell. I heard Commissioner Shaw tell other prisoners that he would punish them; I heard him say to a fellow serving nine months that he would make it seem nine years."

School Children Tell How to Save "Old Ironsides"

THE frigate "Constitution" is in danger. It will require $150,000 to put the vessel into condition to continue afloat as a permanent reminder of the glorious part she has played in American history. The Navy Department needs the dock occupied by the vessel at the overcrowded Charlestown Navy Yard. It has been suggested that the money be raised by the school children, to have the vessel restored and anchored at Marine Park. Further suggestions are awaited. Action must follow unless the vessel rass forever.

The AMERICAN asks for suggestions from Massachusetts school children as to what shall be done with "Old Ironsides" and how the money is to be raised. For the best letter the AMERICAN will pay $5. Send letters, giving age and school attended by writer, to

OLD IRONSIDES EDITOR,
BOSTON AMERICAN.

'OLD IRONSIDES' FIRST OBJECT OF DERISION

CHAPTER IV.

English naval officers ridiculed the new American Navy. London papers posed fun at the awkward ships that were "going to be."

The Constitution was one of the first large frigates to carry long guns —twenty-four—on her main gun deck; and, therefore, the derision and English prophesy that such vessels could not be manoeuvred to advantages in a sea fight.

Joshua Humphreys, the chief naval architect, however, thought he knew what he was about. He built the Constitution on the theory that in order to outclass the best battleships then made he must strike out on new lines, and such lines were finally drawn for speed and stability.

The Constitution "fell home" toward the spar deck in a way to narrow the beam materially and, because of this limited deck, it was possible for the ship to sail more closely into the wind.

Her curved hull, it was thought, carefully provided with ballast, would take the seas with a gradual roll and thus be of great advantage to the gunners.

EARNS NAME 'OLD IRONSIDES.'

The long delay that had been caused by Congress' but given the timbers in the Constitution time to harden and season until such toughness soon earned her the name of "Old Ironsides." In reality there was no iron plate—such protection not being known of at that time.

But there was the finest and best of copper on her keel, and spikes and bolts in her bow and stern, wrought iron. All were furnished by Paul Revere, the North End silver and metal smith.

The invention of carronades made it possible to arm the upper deck with weapons which, while not as effective at long range as the long guns, were nevertheless more dangerous at close quarters because of the weight of their shot.

The long guns on the Constitution had a bore of 5.82-100 inches and with a charge of six pounds of powder, carried effectively 600 yards at an elevation of one degree. The carronades, scarcely four feet in length, were dangerous not more than 150 yards.

Before starting on her cruise a month or more was spent out beyond Boston Light at target practice and drill. A hogshead on a spar one mile distant served as a bullseye and reproduced the treatment at the hands of the gunners.

RACES ENGLISH FRIGATE.

When all was in readiness the Constitution, commanded to sail under Commodore Silas Talbot and First Lieutenant Isaac Hull for the French and Indies. The trip was begun in August, 1799.

Shortly after the Constitution fell in with an English frigate of about the same size.

The captain of the English ship was an old friend of Commodore Talbot a friendly rivalry began. The two the English captain received a bet of a cask of Madeira wine that he could outsail the Constitution.

Captain Talbot accepted the challenge and, after the English frigate had run into port and had its bottom scraped, the two vessels put to sea.

All night they sailed side by side. With morning they were about and, at a signal gun, started for port. While the race was in fun, Lieutenant Hull and Commodore Talbot knew that the outcome might spell success or failure for the new American navy.

ASKS STATE TO GIVE UP KING MONEY

Judge George Curtis Wing of Auburn, Me., appearing before the legislative Committee on Legal Affairs at the State House today, urged a bill to divide the residue, now in the Massachusetts Safe Deposit Co. of the estate of Abbott L. King of Auburn among King's two sisters and brother. This residue, amounting to $2,500, is now the property of the State, King's widow having died without legal heirs.

King worked for the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company for 25 years and died in Tewksbury in April, 1913. His widow died the following September.

King's brother is Arthur B. King of Auburn, and his two sisters, Ina Cross and Alice C. King, also live in Auburn.

SLAYER LEAPS FROM WINDOW TO DEATH

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 27.—While policemen were hunting all over New York city today for Nathan Pullman of Chicago, who is sought here for a family reunion and murdered his wife and daughter, the fugitive, apparently stricken with remorse, jumped out of a third-story window at Forty-third street and Third avenue. He suffered injuries from which he died fifteen minutes later.

At the hotel, from which Pullman plunged to his death, he was registered under the name of "Jones." The register showed that he was accompanied by a woman registered as his wife and the police are now seeking this woman. In the room where he lived one night after killing his wife and daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Bozella, with an axe at No. 714 Dawson street, the police found a number of interesting notes. One read:

"Goodby to everybody. I guess I will make good. I'm going away on a long journey. Ta Ta."

One addressed "to the newspapers" read:

"You are people that I wish they should not worry over them as I because the ones I am addressing as better of without them because they better were their friends. Let those I am addressing better take care of themselves and their unfortunate children. They know there two no good husband, they not make a man of you people and don't make a man fuss over something that can't be helped.

"Never mind, we have heard and seen worse things. So what's the use Shakespeare and, 'What's past help is past grief,' and he seemed to know better than we."

The theory of the police is that Pullman planned to wipe out his entire family. They think he enticed Mrs. Bozella to the room after he had killed his wife and that later he went to the home of another daughter, Mrs. Mina Kasnits, No. 506 East One Hundred and Sixty-fourth street, to slay her. She was absent. Today she said she was not surprised by the tragedy as there had been bitter quarrels between her father and her sister.

She did not know where her father secured the axe, which was found under a bed in the room where the slayings occurred.

EIGHT PLYMOUTH STRIKERS ARRESTED

Plymouth, Jan. 27.—Eight strikers at the Plymouth Cordage Company plant here were arrested early today by Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon, on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Shortly after midnight, seven men were seen marching down North Main street, apparently drilling, uttering curious sounds and making such noise that the disturbance could be heard a long distance. Sheriff Porter told the court he was of the opinion that the men marching could be the nucleus of a mob going to the company's gates, for the purpose of assaulting workmen, who were doing watchmen's duty.

Seeks U. S. Fund for Upper-Class Serbian Children

London, Jan. 27.—Mme. Grouitch, the American wife of the Serbian Under Secretary, has arrived in London from Nish after a perilous journey. In their retreat, she says, the Serbians lost everything. Mme. Grouitch herself lost her own personal property.

Mme. Grouitch says the sufferings from hunger and disease are especially terrible among the upper classes in Serbia. She is going to America shortly to raise funds for Serbian upper-class children, under eight years of age.

BAXTER'S TRIP ADDS TO BOOM FOR M'CALL

Charles S. Hatch, who managed Governor McCall's campaign last fall, returned today from New York, whither he had gone—State House gossips believe—on a political mission of some importance, not unconnected with the possibility of a nomination of Governor McCall for President.

No one knew E Baxter was going to New York; neaven Governor McCall, Baxter says. But with his return, when he will found to have held political conference there, the presidential gossip bees.

NILES FORMALLY MARRIED TO MODEL

Miss Eileen Amelia Livingstone, the former artist's model and dancer was finally, really and truly married today to Leland Henry Niles, Harvard '14, of Amsterdam, N. Y., at the parochial residence of St. Francis de Sales' parish, in Charlestown, by the Rev. William H. Walsh, curate.

Since the romance between the former Harvard "Goldcoaster" and the pretty model became generally known, they have been reported married several times, only to have to deny the report. On account of the speculation, the wedding today was a very quiet.

Briggs Issues Report Strong for Freshmen

"THERE is no reason why a Harvard man and a Yale man should have anything to conceal from each other regarding their athletes or their athletic policy. Strategy in a game may be legitimate and admirable; strategy in the negotiations of friendly rivals is inexcusable; and constant suspicion is as intolerable as it is unjust."

Thus says Dean LeBaron R. Briggs, Harvard's chairman of athletics, in his annual report to President Lowell for the academic year 1914-1915. While the dean's rendering of his stewardship is largely confined to the year ending last June, the foregoing remarks undoubtedly had something in common with the intelligibility squabble of last year, whereby Harry Ledlore and other Ell athletes were suspended from competition for playing Summer baseball.

"Do as you would be done by' is still a better motto than 'Do or you will be done,'" added Dean Briggs. "The time for political manoeuvring in athletics is gone and should never have come. Yale, Harvard and Princeton, closely bound together in athletic sport, are doing their best to maintain in that sport a realization of straightforward courtesy."

SHOULD BE MORE OPEN.

"It is the hope of the Harvard Athletic Committee to avoid those bickerings which, magnified by the press, have from time to time aroused unfriendly feeling, and to establish in intercollegiate athletics a more generous and open relation than has existed heretofore."

The Dean said that he had been officially made responsible in all negotiations with other colleges about the eligibility of athletes, etc. He sees a change for the better in Harvard's manners on the baseball diamond, but still sees room for improvement.

"Bad manners on the baseball field and tactics that in some sports would be condemned as unsportsmanlike are still regarded by students and the general public as part of the game; and of these bad manners Harvard teams, though in general clean players, are not yet wholly free. In the last few years the talk of players on the ball field has been much less frequent and objectionable.

"Nobody would exact perfect silence, or forbid the captain the genuine encouragement of his men. Yet even now a large part of what the players say results from deliberate adoption of a technical vocabulary, chosen with the object of the best doubtful in its purpose. Only a false conception of sportsmanship demands a gentleman in playing it shall cease to be a gentleman."

MAY CHANGE RULING.

Dean Briggs added that the captains of the Yale, Princeton and Harvard nines signed together a document last Spring requesting that their ruling which banishes coaches from the players' bench be rescinded. No such action was possible at that time, but the Dean, while he approves of the present ruling, adds that "as the question is one of expediency, rather than right, we can afford to give up the rule if the feeling against it is strong."

He thinks that athletic Harvard may have a chance to follow its course of training sprouts unfortunately. Dean Briggs said that the Athletic Committee requested the faculty to transfer the 1.30 to 2.30 o'clock classes, substituting them in the morning, starting the opening of college at 8, instead of 9, or tagging them onto the afternoon work from 2.30 to 5.30 o'clock or filling in an hour during the noon time.

"It is especially in the Fall and Winter, candidates for the athletic teams, as well as men who exercise for recreation, are often hampered by their courses, especially those which do laboratory work. These courses come during the hours from 2 to 5.30 o'clock and prevent the student's working with their respective teams or doing other exercises at that daylight."

IN RELATION FRESHMEN.

Dean Briggs also spent much space in talking about interdormitory athletic affairs among the Harvard Freshmen.

"Whether intercollegiate games are desirable for freshmen may be doubtful," declared the Dean. "The one clear thing is that teams playing in whole or in part under the interdormitory plan cannot compete on even terms with teams trained throughout the season in match games at home and abroad.

"As the Andover plan has seemed not quite adequate, and as after in competing with Exeter, so would a system chiefly interdormitory fail to give Harvard a fair chance in competing with Yale.

"There appears to be only four ways of dealing with the problem: a, no-dual competitions; b, competition without interdormitory preliminaries; c, the persuading of our neighbors to join us in adopting interdormitory preliminaries; d, the abandonment of freshman intercollegiate athletics, and a vigorous attempt to exercise all able-bodied freshmen in out-of-door games.

Harvard to Start Team of 36 in C. A. Games

Exactly three dozen athletes will start Harvard's activity at the Coast Artillery games at the State Armory Saturday night. The most important entries are the varsity relay team, which races with Tech and Oliver Johnstone, who will compete in the high jump. A relay quartette of Harvard freshmen will also oppose the Tech cubs in a short distance relay.

Harvard has already arranged for its representatives in the B. A. A. games a week later. Entries have been made in the handicap race, the shot put, high jump and the special 60-yard dash and 45-yard hurdles. Harvard will also enter the distance relays in this meet, the first team meeting Cornell.

Harvard's 1,560-yard relay team is apt to be the sensation of the indoor season. Eddie Teschner, about due for his best work, is to run the first two laps against Tech. Willie Wilcox, grabbing the baton for the next two-ply journey. Minot, by quick steering at the time trials, has also won third position. The anchor man will be Captain Bingham, who is confident he can be depended upon to hold up his end.

JIM WRAY MAY LAND AS COACH AT YALE

With the return of Guy Nickalls, the English rowing coach, to Yale waters, some definite news should be forthcoming as to who will succeed Gene Glannini, the freshman coach.

It is reported at Cambridge that Jim Wray, who was summarily dropped by Harvard last fall, is a candidate for this position. Wray, it is said, prefers to work during the rowing season, and has therefore written to New Haven for the vacant freshman coachship.

If the English "gentleman" coach decides that Wray will understudy him well, the good-natured Australian will be given a chance to get a whack at the Harvard freshmen eights with his Ell youngsters, and may later find himself as head coach at Yale should Nickalls decide to quit this country.

BURLESQUE GAME THE BIG FEATURE

A burlesque on the last Dudley-Notre Dame baseball game will feature the dancing party of these two organizations which have now combined and are known as the Captivations. These two organizations were bitterest rivals on the Roxbury baseball field last year. Peace having come between organized ball and the Federals it came too between the Dudleys and Notre Dames.

In the lineup of the burlesque ball game will be the two Bonds, Joe and Hugh, Cush Cooney, Tommy Madden, Frank Sullivan, the O'Leary brothers and Jim Mulvey. Senator McLaughlin and Representative Phelan will be the umpires, and the diamond will be laid in Intercolonial Hall, Friday night.

TWO CUBS FOR MEMPHIS.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 27.—The Memphis (Southern Association) club has acquired Pitcher Hogg and Outfielder Knieseley from the Chicago Cubs.

THE RABBIT'S COLUMN

Walter J. Mcgranville
SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

There appears to be plenty to do among the Braves just now. With a trade talk involving Captain Johnny, the fact that "Red" Smith hasn't signed and the retirement of "Butch" Schmidt. There is much food for thought. And now it looks to be some problem, this filling in of the gaps fast opening in the outfield.

I am not worrying much over the fact that Smith hasn't sent in his contract. I believe he will play for the Braves and that very soon we shall hear he is in the fold.

* * *

Joe Connolly got into line as I expected he would. The Woonsocket millman will help a whole lot. "Joey," as they call him, is a whole lot better outfielder and hitter than he gets credit for being. Watch his work across in 1916. This should be a big year for him.

* * *

Speaking of "Butch" Schmidt, whose retirement has just been announced, let me add my confirmation of one of the big fellow. When he came to the Braves he looked clumsy and out of form a crack first-sacker. However, we all knew he could hit the ball a mile and we're pulling for him. Johnny Evers had "Butch" in the air quite a lot during the early part of his first season, but Kell, him since until "Butch" discovered that Johnny was only trying to point out his faults.

* * *

Evers eventually helped Schmidt to become a first-class first-baseker and they are the best of friends.

* * *

"Butch" was never very strong for the National League circuit. It gave him too little opportunity to get home to Baltimore where his wife and "kiddies" were. This has won out over any desire he might have to remain the big money Schmidt likes money as well as most of us, but he has figured it correctly. Having a paying business, one that is increasing in importance all the time, it is but natural for him to desire to keep it moving in the right direction. After their baseball days are over, baseball players have to turn their attention to other things. Not all are as well fixed as "Butch." Here's wishing you all the success in the world, "Schmitty." There is one thought I have and that is, "Don't look pretty fine for first for us during the coming season. We shall miss you."

* * *

President Haughton is evidently a Rabbit Maranville fan for Tuohey has been nothing to speak of done concerning the Braves and Harvard might be on the announcement on the football coach matter.

* * *

I wonder what "Boss" George said when he got the letter from "Butch"?

* * *

The banquet, in observance of the fortieth anniversary of the National League, will be a big affair. I think that the list of speakers will include the most prominent baseball men and while about the tables will be gathered all who in the early days made the game as attractive as it is.

* * *

It must be news and good news at that, to the wrestling fans, to learn that Gotch will meet Stecher. If it is only a question of purse, George V. Tuohey should settle that at once.

THOMAS AND SCOTT ARE READY TO SIGN

President J. J. Lannin of the Red Sox, back in Boston and planning an extended stay this time, announces that Chester Thomas has written him from Sharon, Kan., where he is that catcher is on a hunting trip that he has received his contract, the terms suit and he will forward the agreement on to headquarters in a few days. Lannin also states that Shortstop Everett Scott has sent word the figures named in his contract are satisfactory. Counting Thomas and Scott in the fold, the only Red Sox players not in line are Pitcher Wood, Collins and Shocker, the broiler of chaser.

RUDOLPH TO COACH WILLIAMS TOSSERS

Williamstown, Jan. 27.—Pitcher "Dick" Rudolph of the Braves has signed to coach the Williams College battery candidates this Spring. He will start work going in the "cage" early in February and remain in Williamstown until it comes time to report for duty at the Miami, Fla., training camp.

'Taking Chances' Not for the 'Rabbit'

"President Haughton of the Boston National League club received this morning a letter from "Rabbit" Maranville, written from his home in Springfield, which indicates pretty conclusively that although Maranville's name has appeared in the lineup for several basketball games during the past few weeks, the premier shortstop of the Braves is complying with President Haughton's wishes and is indulging in no basketball. Mr. Haughton believes that the "Rabbit" would be taking too great chances by playing in so strenuous a game and "Rabbit" coincide in that opinion, as expressed in his letter, was most pleasing to President Haughton. His letter follows:

Springfield, Mass.,
January 25, 1916.

Dear Sir:

Your letter received and was very much disappointed to hear saying that you think I am playing basketball. I am not playing basketball and I cannot help it if they advertise me, as they have been doing lately.

Someone called me up last night and asked me if everything was O. K. to play in Boston, and I told him that it was not, that I did not know anything about it. I did promise that I would play in Franklin, N. H., about two months ago, which was for February 2. I would like to play in that game, as I gave them my word that I would, but to say that you will not give me permission so that's all there is to it.

I don't want you to think that I do not respect what you say, as I do, and that rules are rules, and I live up to them, but as for playing and taking chances I am not.

Hoping to hear from you, I remain,
Respectfully yours,
(Signed) RABBIT.

BRADY AND BOWDEN WIN INDOOR TITLE

Mike "King" Brady of Oakley and George Bowden of Tedesco, became the indoor golf champions of the Commonwealth by defeating Jack Kerrigan of Dedham, and Jack Blair of Commonwealth by two and one in 36 holes decided at the end of the series as a result of yesterday's win by the B. A. A. pair the contest is ended and the golf championship which has been played at Filene's today is off.

Brady played the golf over the course which represented the Country Club. He whizzed the red honor for a 74, while Tommy Kerrigan scored a 76. Brady had five fives in his card, while Kerrigan had the same number, but in addition a six which hurt. Bowden's medal was 80 and Blair's 85. The winner's best ball was 72, while the losers were a shot more.

F. BAKER TO LAND IN NEW YORK, 'TIS SURE

New York, Jan. 27.—The deal for J. Franklin Baker, whereby the erstwhile home run manufacturer will play with the Highlanders the coming season, is as good as closed, according to talk on Big Broadway. Connie Mack has promised that Col. Ruppert & Huston Baker will become a New Yorker and it is generally understood a purchase price of $25,000 has been agreed upon. It's all out and dried, it can be authoritively announced, and with Lee Magee also a Highlander, "Smiler Bill" Donovan is expected to cut up a big fuss in the 1916 American League marathon.

TOM KERRIGAN GETS BERTH AT SIWANOY

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 27.—Tom Kerrigan will be the new golf professional at the Siwanoy Golf Club. This was decided at a meeting of the directors last night, who also elected John Anderson, captain fo the club and Frank Boyd, chairman of the green committee. Kerrigan, who was formerly employed at the Dedham, Mass., Country Club, is one of the youngest professional in the business. The vacancy at the Siwanoy Club was made by Charley Singleton, who recently went to Oakland.

MEDFORD SEVEN SCORES.

Medford High's seven ran up the lofty score of 9 to 1 on Malden High in their hockey battle on Mystic Lake. Prendergast scored five goals.

BOXING BRIEFS and GOSSIP

JUST when the Armory A. A. has a figure-enough show booked one of the principals becomes hors du combat, for that's the condition Mike Glover is in today as a result of boils, coupled with throat trouble.

GLOVER'S M. D. has prescribed a rest of at least two weeks and that means the stylish Glover-Britton battle, booked for decision at the Broadway next Tuesday night, must lay over until late in February.

IVY LEWIS is not after a fighting sub-stitute. Dan Morgan is willing to let Britton show with the best man obtainable and rumor has it there's an outside chance Joe Eagan will go on with the New York star.

THE match will suit Eddie Mack. Eagan's manager, if he can get it, and Mack's been going at a fast clip of late months and claims he will give Cambridge members a good run for their money if he is substituted for Glover.

A FAN, writing the AMERICAN from Manchester, N. H., but carelessly neglecting to put on his cognomen, states he saw the Butler-Nelson semi-windup bout and that the referee was kidding when he called it a draw. Winds up Mr. Fan: "Butler won by a block."

M. W. GRAVEN, Pawtucket, R. I., We will do our best to fill your queries and here goes: Jack Johnson, had he been as good when on with Willard as he was when he met Jeffries at Reno, would almost surely have maintained his title. The writer saw the Reno battle and was also at Las Vegas, N. M., when Johnson defeated Flynn. Lil' Artha was sliding then; sliding fast, due to high living, although was considerably lighter, meaning his weight, at Reno than he was at Havana.

LETTERS at the AMERICAN for Jimmy Looney, Howard McRae's manager, and Hector McInnis.

"KID" BOLDUC, the New Hamp-shire lightweight wrestler, writes stating he is preparing for his March tour. He's now at Hallowell and seeks bouts with any of the Providence boxers or a member of the division barred.

E. T. BROWN of Indianapolis, Ind., who has Jack Blackburn, the well-known brunette, on view at the AMERICAN stating his star is ready to receive Boston bookings. "Jack is going faster than ever before in his career," pens Brown, "and he is as good as they come at his weight."

GOTHAM BOXING NEWS

BOB LAGG, manager of Joe Rivers, has notified the Harlem Sporting Club management to set back the Rivers-Leonard-Rivers bout until February 11 so as to permit the Los Angeles Mexican to recover from the injury he received in his ten-round session with Richie Mitchell at Cincinnati. Sam Mc'ea and Harry Willis, who were also to have met February 4, will also box on the new date.

YOUNG MARTIN and Frankie Daley meet in the ten-round semi-final at the Jack Toland-"Solly" Harris field contest at the Broadway Sporting Club Saturday night.

JIMMY JOHNSTON is one man who thinks Frank Moran can beat Dillon. He further adds that in a well-rounded bout with Willard it is no sure thing Moran would carry off the honors.

THE National Sporting Club of Phil-adelphia is trying to arrange a match between Ted Lewis and Marty Farrell and one between Joe Azevedo and Jimmy Murphy to be pulled off in February.

YOUNG DYSON, the Providence light-weight, will meet "Billy" Parsons of Halifax in the latter city February 8.

EXETER TRACK DATES.

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 26.—Manager H. B. Peabody is out with Phillips Exeter's track schedule. The card:

February 5, B. A. A. meet; relay race with Andover. Feb. 12, twentieth annual faculty shield meet. Feb. 19, A. A. A. Intercollegiate meet; April 29-29, Penn relays; varsity. May 6, Harvard freshmen at Exeter; May 13, Harvard interscholastics; May 20, Yale interscholastics; May 29, Andover at Exeter.

Joe Tinker Says Jawn Evers Is on Market

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Manager Joe Tinker of the Cubs makes the positive announcement that the new owners of the Braves evidently want to get rid of Johnny Evers, as he has been offered the Keystone King in exchange for "Heinie" Zimmerman, his slugging third baseman.

Tinker states he turned down the Boston club's offer because he considers Zimmerman invaluable to his club on account of his great hitting ability, and is confident Steve Yerkes, the former Red Sox, whom Joe saw at work in the Federal League's 1915 campaign, is fully capable of holding up his end at the middle station.

"Evers can't play Evers now," states Tinker. "I have a star second baseman in Yerkes, and what is more, I need a third baseman. I know Zimmerman is one of the best third sackers in the game and feel that he will do us more good than Evers would.

"Evers has an unusually big contract that has two years more to run, and at the end of that time I think John will be about ready to retire from the game.

"Not so with Zimmerman. He is much younger, and I think he will be in the game for at least five more years."

From "somewhere in New York," Sinclair sent the following message by courier:

Why the dickens do they all pick on me? Why does everybody pay to me? Tell me something that no one else wants! Haven't I said before that if I failed to get the Giants I was through with baseball? Haven't I? Of course I have. Why do they pick on me?

Sinclair Shrieks at Price Asked for Cardinals

New York, Jan. 27.—Lon Hocker, attorney for the St. Louis Cardinals, slipped into town late yesterday and immediately started in pursuit of Harry Sinclair for the purpose of extracting $400,000 from the on monarch's jeans, or wherever it is he carries his $20,000,000 bankroll.

It was stated that to be "within the law" Hocker would give Sinclair the Cardinals as a sort of a "value received," but men of long legal experience were of the opinion that the Cardinals did not represent anything akin to a $100,000 value.

Scattered reports received up to 2.30 a. m. indicated that Sinclair had evaded pursuit and was six or seven jumps ahead of Hocker at that time. However, friends of the oil magnate feared he would be run down during the day because a recent attack of [illegible] had rid him of one of his [illegible] ance power.

Sinclair, it was said, was prepared to fight to the bitter end, in case he was overtaken, and would resist with all his power any attempts on the part of Hocker to relieve him of $400,000.

From "somewhere in New York," Sinclair sent the following message by courier:

Why the dickens do they all pick on me? Why does everybody pay to me? Tell me something that no one else wants! Haven't I said before that if I failed to get the Giants I was through with baseball? Haven't I? Of course I have. Why do they pick on me?

THIRD ROUND IS ON IN SQUASH TOURNEY

The State squash racquet championships tournament, now being contested on the courts of the Harvard Club, has reached the third round. One match has already been settled. Constantine Hutchins, B. A. A., several times State champion, vanquishing "Chick" Peabody, Union Boat Club, in straight sets, 15-13, 15-6, 15-5.

Matt Bartlett, Tennis and Racquet Club, the State champion last year, clashes with Channing Frothingham, Harvard Club, today, and Karl Lindsey meets his fellow clubmate, H. R. Greenough, Saturday. Buck Townsend and Norman Cabot, Tennis and Racquet Club stars, fight it out. In yesterday's second round matches Lindsey defeated Carl, B. A. A., 9-15, 15-14, 15-7, 15-11.

DAVE SHEAN TO BE OFFERED OLD POST

Providence, Jan. 27.—It can be put down as a certainty that Dave Shean will be offered the manager of the Providence (International League) Club. William H. Draper, the new owner of the Grays, stated today he had an engagement with Shean in Boston tomorrow and he was confident he would return to Providence with Dave's signed contract in his possession. Draper said he would incorporate the club in a few days and that the name behind the club would be named in the papers filed will be Michael W. Norton and Alderman John Kelso.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Howard P. The race was the feature of one of the best athletic meets ever held in New York. The speedy Drew left in his wake Joe G. Loomis, Chicago A. A., who beat him for the national 100 yard championship in San Francisco last summer.

Dancing and Health

What a World-Famous Artist Has to Say

By JANE McLEAN

"ONE hears so much of dancing in this America that we all assume as greatly said Mademoiselle Maclezova, world famous ... Ballets Russes, flashing a brilliant smile across the lights of her dressing table. "And people talk of the ... how ... who has not adopted the foreign method of grace as a means to health.

... I take ... I do not take up dancing as a fad or just because we happen to like it for the time being; we make it a matter of natural development.

"I believe that the preliminary dance movements, the ... rigid and hard as it is, are of the utmost importance in the grace and beauty of a woman's figure. ... ...

Americans Savings Increase, But United States Needs to Awaken to the Necessity for More Thrift, to Maintain Financial Supremacy

TOO MANY FAIL TO PROVIDE BY SAVING FOR OLD AGE

By B. C. FORBES.

New York, Jan. 12.—Americans say the deposits are far larger than the total amount of money in the whole country.

For every man, woman and child in the United States there is $69.39 in savings banks. The total is $15,907,- 276,812. While the volume of circulation in the country stands equal to almost the foregoing amount, each person would receive less than $40. The total circulation is $1,909,- 184,171.

And savings are increasing.

The latest official figures are over 600 months old. The aggregate deposits in savings banks last June were $4,997,797,613.

* * *

Statements obtained for the AMERICAN from the State banking superintendents of seventeen States disclose that since then thrift and savings have increased.

Only the majority report possible quickening of the spirit of economy among the American people. A few thousand more would help.

Astounding figures have been compiled showing the lamentable failure of a large proportion of the American people to save enough money to take care of themselves in their old age.

The records of the Surrogates' offices of New York county relative to estates of the five years ended December 31, 1914, all average of 27,011 adults died each year, and that of these 22,951 or 84.9 per cent. left no estate at all. Of the 4.1 per cent., left estates valued at $500 to $1,000, and 1.42% of a thousand, left estates of more than $1,000, but less than $5,000.

The National Association of Unclaimed Money Holders, Inc., 1 Madison Avenue, New York City, has published a booklet containing a list of unclaimed money deposited in savings banks in the State of New York. The list contains the names of depositors who have left money in banks for periods ranging from 20 to 40 years. The total amount of money deposited in these banks and left unclaimed by depositors is $1,000,000. The largest deposit is $5,000 and the smallest deposit is $5. The list contains the names of depositors who have left money in banks in the following cities: Albany, Amsterdam, Auburn, Binghamton, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Cohoes, Corning, Cortland, Elmira, Fulton, Geneva, Gloversville, Hudson, Ithaca, Johnstown, Kingston, Lockport, Long Island City, Middletown, Mount Vernon, Newburgh, New York City, Niagara Falls, North Tonawanda, Ogdensburg, Oneida, Oneonta, Oswego, Peekskill, Plattsburg, Port Jervis, Poughkeepsie, Rochester, Rome, Saratoga Springs, Schenectady, Syracuse, Troy, Utica, Watertown, Watervliet, White Plains, Yonkers.

The National Association of Unclaimed Money Holders, Inc., is composed of savings bank officials who are trying to induce depositors to withdraw their money. The Association has been organized for the purpose of reducing the amount of unclaimed money in savings banks

There is a rank due to the United States among nations which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it; if we desire to secure peace, one of the most powerful instruments of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war.—GEORGE WASHINGTON

The President Asks Us Today to Share Our Good Fortune with a Suffering People

THE President of the United States, the greatest executive officer in the world, has done an extraordinary thing. The Senate of the United States, the greatest deliberative body in the world, has done an extraordinary thing. Governor McCall, chief executive of Massachusetts, has done an extraordinary thing. These great political departments of the State and nation have taken official cognizance of the suffering of the Jews in the war zone.

President Wilson has set aside today, January 27, as a day on which he asks the kindly people of America to give something out of the surplus which most of us enjoy above the necessaries of life to the poor Jews in Europe, who are dying because they have not any of these necessaries.

The extraordinary action of the President and of the Senate is proof of the extraordinary crisis in the affairs of a great, competent, useful branch of the white race, which is being slowly and fearfully ground under the heel of war.

These Jews are non-combatants. Neutrality will not be impaired by helping them.

They tell us that we have no friends among the warring nations of Europe. Perhaps not among the chancelleries which too long have represented the peoples of Europe. But if by our charity our people make friends with the people behind the chancelleries we shall have friends where they will count the most.

After this war is over and victor and vanquished have cast up their losses and weighed them against the causes of the war their hatred of the diplomacy which dragged them into this unnecessary conflict will make the hostility of the chancelleries of Europe of very little importance to the people of America.

Please do not forget that today has been designated by the head of the nation as a day of charity for the poor Jews. On this day and on subsequent days, so long as the poor Jews may need it, and so long as we shall be able to give it, the President requests us to share a little of our good fortune with those who so terribly need it.

Measures That Congress Should Now Enact

A DEMOCRATIC organ complains that the critics of the administration and the majority in Congress are mere fault-finders, who never offer any constructive criticisms.

Well, how about these—all of them measures the Hearst papers have over and over again urged the Congress to enact:

1. Appropriations for ADEQUATE naval and military preparedness;

2. Appropriations for the purchase, construction and operation of a GOVERNMENT MERCHANT MARINE;

3. The appointment of a competent commission to formulate and report a feasible method of taking over the ownership and operation of railways;

4. An immediate invitation to all neutral nations to join us in a league for defence of neutral rights and for the promotion of peace;

5. The creation of military and naval colleges in different parts of the country for the free education of young men as officers, who will go into civil life subject to the country's call in case of war;

6. Free tolls to American ships using the Panama Canal, a 5 per cent. preferential rebate upon dutiable goods imported in American vessels, and a clean-cut declaration of the rights upon the seas of our shipping, which the United States will protect by any and all necessary means;

7. Appropriations for the construction of national trunk highways east to west and north to south;

8. The formation of a national marketing commission for the benefit of agriculturists;

9. The prompt and decisive use of the naval and military forces of the United States to restore order and to protect American lives and property in Mexico.

Every one of these CONSTRUCTIVE measures the Hearst newspapers have urged upon Congress.

Every one of them is for the public welfare.

Every one of them could be passed and ought to be passed by this Democratic Congress.

And we doubt that ANY ONE OF THEM will be passed.

"Whipping the Devil Around the Stump"

The Latest British-Made Law of Blockade a Violation of Our Rights

By Albert Bushnell Hart

Professor of the Science of Government at Harvard University

WHEN we read in English newspapers that the time has come for such weak and inexperienced diplomats as Sir Edward Grey to take back seats while naval men apply the law of the sea, we naturally expect another batch of those Orders-in-Council from which the British government from time to time manufactures international law for neutrals.

This process began immediately after the war broke out, by the British notice that certain parts of the North Sea were mined so that neutral vessels must keep out.

It was continued by British definitions of blockade which have grown steadily more drastic. It was carried forward by orders for taking neutral vessels into port on suspicion of carrying contraband. It was especially revealed in the British announcement some months ago that the coasts of the North Sea were in a condition of blockade.

Every one of these orders was contrary to the principles of international law which were accepted by Great Britain herself, down to the beginning of the present war, and every one was contrary to the interests of the United States.

A Cool Announcement

Now comes the cool suggestion that Great Britain will announce an "actual blockade" and then we shall see what will happen to us! At the start we may safely assert that the British have not the slightest intention of declaring a genuine blockade, because that would mean the stationing of ships outside the German ports at such points that vessels attempting to go in or out of those ports would be likely to be captured.

Inasmuch as during a year and a half neither the Germans nor the English have ventured to send out into the North Sea squadrons of more than half a dozen vessels, and only two or three times, nobody can believe that the British naval authorities will now risk their first class ships where within four hours of their arrival at their stations they would attract a flotilla of torpedo boats and submarines.

Perhaps the English only mean that they will issue a "paper blockade," declaring certain coasts of their enemy closed, just as they did a hundred years ago. Then they could capture and confiscate American vessels and cargoes found anywhere on the seas if bound in or out of those ports.

Such an "actual blockade" is not a likelihood; it is not international law; it is not civilized warfare. It is simply a device to break up a certain kind of American commerce, without going to the expense and danger of the genuine blockade which alone would justify such captures.

Hits at America

There is at present next to no direct trade between the United States and the German ports; and therefore it seems likely that the talk about "actual blockade" is really meant to cover an absolute prohibition of American commerce to neutral countries in articles desired by the Germans.

Another way of whipping the devil around the stump is by calling everything useful contraband. The United States government from the beginning of the war has accepted the doctrine that genuine contraband of war may be captured if bound to a neutral power, with a probable destination in an enemy's country.

Our government has therefore been remiss in not protesting more directly and vigorously against the British expansion of the list of contraband to cover rubber, foodstuffs, cotton and many other articles, which might be used by an army, but in all probability will be used by the civil population.

London talks sagely about precedents found in the action of the United States during the Civil War. It talks in vain. The only precedents are the captures by United States vessels of ships, mostly British, which were carrying genuine contraband, intended to be delivered eventually in Confederate territory. That principle has not been denied in the present war. What the British are trying to do, without right or reason, is to stop non-contraband goods from reaching Germany by any channel.

A Leading Question

Why should such goods not reach Germany? We have an established international right to ship non-contraband, either directly to any port of Germany that is not actually blockaded, or indirectly through a neutral port. We do not get that right from Great Britain or from Germany or from The Hague Conference. It is part of our character as a sovereign power which is not obliged to go to war with either Great Britain or Germany, or to be treated as though we were at war. Being at peace with all the belligerents, we can trade with them all.

Great Britain thinks that the comparatively small amount of American products that reach Germany is an offence which must be punished by creating new principles of capture. Then what about the vastly greater amount of material, both contraband and innocent, which is sent to Great Britain?

It is our neutral right to ship contraband goods anywhere subject to the danger of capture, and to ship non-contraband anywhere without danger of capture. If President Wilson's administration should fail to make that clear to the British government it would give up one of our clearest and most essential rights

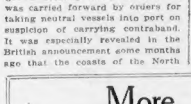
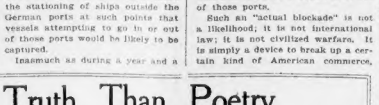
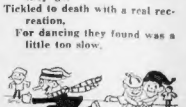
As Old as They Feel!



GRANDMA was seventy-one in November.
Great Uncle Ezra is seventy-two;
Grandpa declares that he well can remember
His old days in college with Chauncey Depew.
You'd think that they all would be quietly waiting
The summons that calls to the cloudy Beyond;
But not these old birds—they have all gone out skating.
They're kicking their heels up on Cafferty's pond.

THEY fell for the fox trot and tango last season,
But now these diversions are not up-to-date;
Our set doesn't do them, and that is the reason
Our aged relations have learned how to skate
Gliding with well-balanced equilibration
Gracefully over the surface they go,
Tickled to death with a real recreation,
For dancing they found was a little too slow.





LEAVE to the schoolboy the chair by the chimney,
Let the young shrink from the snow and the cold;
But, while the blood can still tingle, my Jim'ney!
Hearthsides no longer shall shelter the old.
Doctors may solemnly croak out a warning
That Death is abroad on the mid-Winter breeze,
But Cafferty's pond's like a mirror this morning
And Death has no terrors for old folks like these!

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

PART TWO.

A COUPLE of years ago the writer was visiting a great modern tool and machine factory employing some four thousand men.

The possibilities for dirt and grime and black grease in this industry can hardly be excelled, and ten years ago the average machine shop was a cross between Dante's Inferno and the screening department of a coal mine for blackness.

In fact, any able-bodied machinist who showed anything but black about him except the whites of his eyes was rather ashamed of himself than otherwise.

But the men's entrance to this great plant was like the hall of some public building.

The first rooms you came to on the right and the left were great lockers and washrooms with white enamelled bowls and hot and cold water like the locker rooms of a great gymnasium. Here every workman was expected to leave his street clothing and put on a clean suit of overalls and a special pair of shop shoes before going into the workshop.

A lunch room was provided in the building where he could either order a hot lunch at little more than cost price or eat the lunch he brought with him, and when he washed up at night after quitting time he threw his dirty overalls into great baskets to be carried to the laundry and would find a clean suit in his locker when he returned next morning.

When the men came pouring out through the great doors again into the street they were as cleanly and tidy and almost as well dressed as the average clerk or salesman or business man. The rest of the factory, of course, corresponded; the workshops were flooded with light, for all the walls and half the roof were glass; there wasn't a speck of dust or floating grime flying anywhere.

The floors were as clean as those of the average schoolroom or kitchen. The work benches were brown and well oiled, but clear of every speck or scrap, except the metal which was being fashioned and the tools absolutely necessary. All the seldom-used tools and gauges and cutters were arranged in racks under the care of a tool librarian, who issued them as they were wanted. Every speck of dust or flying scraps was sucked into baskets or hoppers and shot down to the floor below.

In-Shoots

Uneasy lies the head that nurses a soft job.

Love invariably loosens the tongue of the wary.

The water wagon appeals to a lot of us because it is economical.

When a fellow doesn't need friends the friends usually need him.

Anyhow, the man who sits down and waits for success can save shoe leather.

Be sure you are right and then prepare for a lot of knocks.
